LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL.

U. S. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE,

Washington, D. C., July 5, 1902.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith, as No. 23 of North American Fauna, a technical work on the generic names of mammals, by my assistant, Dr. Theodore Sherman Palmer. It consists of three parts: (1) An annotated list of the generic names of mammals; (2) an alphabetical list of the families of mammals, and (3) a classified list of the generic names, arranged by orders and families.

The first part was begun by me in 1884, but owing to pressure of other work I was unable to carry it on, and turned it over to Dr. Palmer for completion. The second and third parts are wholly Dr. Palmer's.

Respectfully,

C. HART MERRIAM,

Chief, Biological Survey.

Hon. JAMES WILSON,

Secretary of Agriculture.

INTRODUCTION.

HISTORY AND OBJECTS OF THE INDEX.

Since the publication of the tenth edition of the 'Systema Naturæ' of Linnaeus, in 1758, the number of generic names of mammals has multiplied with ever-increasing rapidity. This fact can readily be appreciated if the intervening century and a half be divided into three periods of approximately even length: (1) 1758-1800, (2) 1801-1850, (3) 1851-1900. At the beginning of the first period only 39 genera were recognized, but at its close about 175 generic names had been proposed, of which probably less than 100 were recognized. At the end of the second period (1850) the number was approximately 1,200, and at the close of the third had increased to more than 4,000, of which 1,840 were admitted by Trouessart as entitled to recognition. In 1901 more than 100 new generic names were added to the list.

This rapid increase in the number of names has been due partly to increased activity in systematic work, partly to subdivision of older groups of mammals, partly to duplication of names through inadvertence or otherwise, but more especially to the marvelous development in paleontology. Of the genera described before 1800, only three—Mammut, Megalonyx, and Megatherium—belong to extinct groups. A few years later this number was augmented by the names of numerous forms described from the Paris basin; since then, by the names required for the hosts of extinct mammals described from the deposits of France, Germany, Greece, India, Australia, the United States, and Argentina.

Investigation has shown the necessity of subdividing older groups, as the older generic limits were too broad to permit grouping forms with sufficient precision. As a result, the genus of to-day is much more restricted than that of a century or more ago, and consequently the recognized genera and subgenera have greatly increased in number. Early authors gave little attention to questions of priority, and the difficulty of consulting current literature and of keeping abreast of investigations made in foreign lands was greater than at the present day; hence each author quoted only papers accessible to him and frequently overlooked those of his contemporaries. Thus, in several cases the same group received a different name in English, French, and German works. Generic names in all branches of zoology have now become so numerous that it is growing more and more difficult to select those which have not previously been used in other classes; preoccupied names have consequently steadily increased in number, resulting in duplication, which, though difficult to avoid, is none the less to be avoided. Unnecessary duplication has also been introduced by the work of purists who refused to recognize barbaric or native names. The common names adopted as generic terms by Lacépède, Lesson, and others, were rejected by Cuvier, Illiger, and their followers, because such terms lacked classical origin or form. (See pp. 29, 45.)

It is easy to see that under these conditions confusion increased as time went on, and it became more and more difficult to ascertain the proper name for any particular group. This difficulty has been lessened somewhat in recent years by the publication of indexes of genera, of which 8 that include genera and subgenera of mammals may be mentioned in this connection. These are Agassiz's 'Nomenclator Zoologicus,' 1842-46; Bronn's 'Index Palæontologicus,' 1848; Marschall's 'Nomenclator Zoologicus,' 1873; Scudder's 'Nomenclator Zoologicus,'^a 1882; Trouessart's 'Catalogus Mammalium,' 1897-98; Sherborn's 'Index Animalium,' 1902; C. O. Waterhouse's 'Index Zoologicus,' 1902, and the annual volumes of the 'Zoological Record.'

Agassiz's 'Nomenclator Zoologicus' brought together about 1,000 names—most of those proposed prior to 1846; Marschall added 453 in 1873; and all of these names were republished in Scudder's 'Universal Index.' Trouessart's 'Catalogue' of 1898 is a list of recognized genera and species, and although including many synonyms, makes no pretense at completeness in this respect. The annual volumes of the 'Zoological Record' contain lists of the new genera published during the year, but the early volumes did not contain the names of extinct groups, and thus far no general index of new names has been published. Agassiz and Marschall, moreover, give only references to the place of publication and volume in which published, without the page, which is often difficult to find. Scudder, in his 'Supplemental List,' sometimes gives the type or included species with the names, but in the 'Universal Index' he gives merely the authority and date without reference, and to find the place of publication it is necessary to consult previous lists. Trouessart also in many cases gives only authority and date.

Notwithstanding these indexes many names were overlooked, and as they were gradually brought to light some of those in current use were found to be preoccupied and others antedated. As a result, names have been shifted so frequently that it has become very difficult to keep pace with the changes, and general readers who do not appreciate the necessity for such changes regard the desired goal of stability as practically unattainable. The extent of these changes is clearly shown in the case of North American mammals. Of the 160 or more generic names used by True in his 'Provisional List of the Mammals of North and Central America,' in 1885, some 35 or 40, or nearly 25 per cent of the entire number, have been changed during recent years on what may be termed bibliographical grounds. Ten of these names have been found to be preoccupied and the others have given way to earlier names. Changes like these can only be avoided by having complete indexes which will show not only what names have been proposed in a given class and on what species they are based, but also whether the same generic names have been previously applied to other groups.

The present index, which differs materially from previous ones in containing much information besides the name, authority, and place of publication, was undertaken in connection with the systematic work on mammals carried on by the Biological Survey, in order to collect for convenient reference not only the names given in previous indexes, but also those which had been overlooked or which had been published since the appearance of these works. Its object is to bring together all the generic and subgeneric names^a of mammals, both living and extinct, which have been proposed since 1758, and to furnish such data of a bibliographical nature as to facilitate finding when and where each name was published, and to what group it was applied. It gives, so far as possible for each name, (1) authority, (2) date of publication, (3) order and family, (4) reference to original place of publication, (5) important secondary references, (6) variations in spelling, (7) type or included species, (8) locality of type species, (9) indication of pre-occupation, with cross reference to names, if any, proposed to replace them, (10) a statement (if published) of the part of extinct animals—as the skeleton, skull, teeth, etc.—which constituted the type specimen, ^aSince it is often merely a matter of personal opinion whether a given group is considered as a genus or subgenus, genera and subgenera are here treated alike, except that a subgenus is indicated as such and if it has been subsequently raised to full generic rank this fact is indicated by a secondary reference.

(11) derivation, and (12) in some cases the application of the name. These facts, while comprising the essential data in regard to a given name, are of little assistance in ascertaining what names have been used for a particular group and which one of several proposed is entitled to recognition. To supply this information the names have been arranged alphabetically under orders and families, each one accompanied by a statement of the authority, date, type or included species, and locality. It is thus possible to tell at a glance all the names which have been used in each family, the dates when they were proposed, the species on which they were based, and approximately the localities of these species.^a In preparing this part of the work it became necessary to collect family and subfamily names, only a few of which had been previously indexed systematically. The work therefore consists of 3 parts: (1) an alphabetical index of genera giving the essential facts in regard to each name; (2) an alphabetical index of families and subfamilies, showing the authority, place and date of publication, and the order to which the name belongs; (3) a systematic index showing the generic names which have been proposed in each family, with the more important facts regarding authorities, dates, and types.

The present index was projected by Dr. C. Hart Merriam about 1884 and was intended at first to include merely the genera of living mammals with the exception of the cetaceans. When undertaken by the present writer in November, 1889, it contained about 250 names. Two years later a systematic examination was made of Scudder's 'Universal Index,' the 'Zoological Record' for 1878-91, and general works on mammals, and the names thus obtained, accompanied only by authority and date, were arranged alphabetically in a skeleton list on the plan of Scudder's Index. Additional names were entered in this list from time to time and the references looked up and verified at the first opportunity. At the close of 1891 the number of genera verified was about 375; on January 1, 1893, it had increased to about 650; on January 1, 1894, to 2,045; on January 1, 1895, to about 3,300; on January 1, 1896, to 3,850; on January 1, 1897, to 3,900; on January 1, 1898, to about 4,275; on January 1, 1899, to 4,318; on January 1, 1900, to about 4,400; and on July 1, 1902, to about 4,500. As the work progressed it was decided to change the plan so as to include all recent genera, and finally to make it complete by indexing extinct genera. Not only works on mammals but general serials and books of reference have been examined for names. Several indexes of genera of birds, fishes, crustacea, insects, etc., have been examined, and Scudder's 'Nomenclator' has been systematically examined at least twice for names in other groups which might preoccupy those of mammals. In short, no effort has been spared to render the list as complete and accurate as possible.

In August, 1894, the Department acquired from Mr. F. H. Waterhouse, librarian of the Zoological Society of London, a manuscript list of genera of mammals prepared on the same plan as his 'Index Generum Avium' published in 1889. This manuscript was generously offered to the Department by the author upon his learning that an index similar in plan to his own, but somewhat broader in scope, was in course of preparation. This offer was at once accepted, and the list was found to contain 3,009 names accompanied by references to place of publication, while the Department list at that date contained 3,604 names, of which 2,848 had been verified. Beside 77 new names and 104 earlier references, many additional important secondary references were furnished by the Waterhouse list, but its greatest value lay in the check which it afforded on the whole work. It is interesting to note the close agreement in these two lists, independently compiled (each author being ignorant of the work undertaken by the other). Not only were practically the same names found in the two lists, but the references in most cases coincided exactly, and are, therefore, more trustworthy than if brought together by one individual.

While it was obviously impracticable to verify references so numerous and so widely scattered after the list was in type, as was said to have been done in the case of Bronn's celebrated Index, certain checks were used during the preparation of the work which eliminated many errors. The names were arranged on cards, typewritten to secure legibility and to avoid errors in spelling. Nearly all the references were verified independently by two persons, and many of the cards afterwards looked over by a third. Notwithstanding these precautions, many errors have undoubtedly crept in. In fact, with 4,500 names, most of which are accompanied by from six to twelve distinct items of information, not to mention the thousands of figures referring to volumes, pages, and years under the references, it can readily be seen that the possibility of error is very great. It is hoped that with the checks above mentioned, and especially with the acquisition of Waterhouse's manuscript, comparatively few names have been overlooked and that few errors will be detected in the references; but in statements regarding types and classification absolute accuracy is unattainable, owing to the variety of ways in which genera have been proposed and the diversity of views held by leading systematists as to the position of many genera or even families.

At first an attempt was made to fix the type of each genus, but this proved impracticable and the plan of including all the species mentioned in the first description was adopted instead. Later on the types fixed by subsequent authors and revisers of groups were noted by inserting the word 'type' in parenthesis after the species so indicated by the first reviser, and by marking the reference to the paper from which this information was obtained 'type fixed.' All this of course necessitated a reexamination of many volumes and greatly delayed the progress of the work. Some cases which should have been reexamined may have been overlooked, thus adding another possible source of error. These details are mentioned, not to magnify the difficulties of the work or to condone errors which it may contain, but merely to show the probability of finding mistakes in an index of this kind in spite of the checks adopted to detect them.

Although nearly twenty years have elapsed since this index was first projected, very little headway was made until 1891, and the work has been actually in progress only about twelve years. The long delay in bringing it to completion has been due largely to the desultory way in which the work had to be done, chiefly at odd moments in the intervals between more important official duties. Changes in the plan and the reexamination of references delayed it far more than would otherwise have been the case. Slow progress in undertakings of this kind is, however, not unusual, as shown by Bronn's elaborate 'Index Palæontologicus,' which was fifteen years in course of preparation. The present index was supposed to have been almost ready for publication in 1894, but had it been issued then it would have comprised only the alphabetical index of genera (Part I) and only 80 per cent of the names now included. The delay has resulted in enlarging the original scope of the work, the addition of nearly 1,000 names and much of the matter on etymology, and the incorporation of many corrections, which, although not perceptible, are none the less important. A number of rare books containing new names have been acquired, and several valuable general works recently published have been examined to the great benefit of the work. Among these may be mentioned Trouessart's 'Catalogus Mammalium,' Roger's 'Verzeichniss der Fossilen Säugethiere,' Miller & Rehn's 'List of North American Land Mammals,' Thomas's 'Genera of Rodents,' Selater & Thomas' 'Book of Antelopes,' W. L. Selater's 'Mammals of South Africa,' Lydekker's 'Deer' and 'Oxen, Sheep, and Goats,' the volumes on monkeys, marsupials, and British mammals in Allen's Naturalists' Library, Beddard's 'Mammals,' Hay's 'Catalogue of Fossil Vertebrates of North America,' Sherborn's 'Index Animalium,' C. O. Waterhouse's 'Index Zoologicus,' and numerous special monographs, including the palæontological papers of Ameghino, Hatcher, Matthew, Osborn, Roth, Scott, and Wortman.

REFERENCES AND DATES.

REFERENCES.

Great care has been taken to ascertain the original place of publication of every genus. This apparently simple object is often difficult of attainment, owing to the obscure manner in which some names are published and the practical impossibility of determining whether or not the reference found is really the first. The matter is important, since a difference of a few months or even a few days may decide the availability of a name.^a A difference in publication of one year caused the rejection of such well-known names as Arvicola, Isomys, and Ochetodon, while priority of only three days resulted in the adoption of Matschie's Zenkerella in place of De Winton's Aethurus, in 1898. Hipposideros Gray is sometimes quoted 1834 (Proc. Zool. Soc. London, p. 53), where it is a nomen nudum, while reference to the original description in 1831 (Zool. Miscellany, p. 37) shows it to be a valid name. Oreas Desmarest is usually quoted 1822, and if correctly so it is pre-occupied by a genus of Lepidoptera (1806) and by a genus of Polyps (1808). It is, however, said to have been described in 1804, and should this prove to be a fact the name would supplant Taurotragus, which is now adopted for the group.

Different species are also likely to be enumerated in later references, and the supposed type derived from a reference commonly accepted as the earliest may prove to be different from the actual type as shown by the original description. Transference of type may be illustrated by the different editions of Linnæus: In the tenth edition, 1758, Manis contains only one species, M. pentadactyla, which is necessarily the type; in the twelfth edition, 1766, two species are given, M. pentadactyla and M. tetradactyla, and the latter has recently been given as the type of the genus. (W. L. Sclater, Mamm. S. Africa, II, p. 216, 1901.)

Secondary references have been freely admitted to indicate the several publications in which a name appeared at close intervals, to indicate changes in spelling, to call attention to important monographs or revisions of groups, to show when subgenera were raised to generic rank, and to fix responsibility for determination of types. No attempt, however, has been made to include every important secondary reference, and more citations will be found under some names than under others. The reason is evident, for while well-known generic names may be found in almost any book of reference, some of the obscure ones are extremely difficult to find, and hence it is desirable to bring together the more important facts in the history of names published in works which are not generally accessible.

^a A few years ago Oldfield Thomas, supposing that Cuvier's well-known genus Cricetus dated from the 'Règne Animal,' 1817, proposed to replace it by Hamster Lacépède, 1799 (Proc. Zool. Soc. London, 1896, 1019). The name, however, was used by Kerr in 1792, and in reality has seven years' priority over Hamster.

The references are brief, but at the same time full enough to indicate clearly the book or paper (without confusing titles of similar but distinct works), the edition, volume, page, plate, and figure where the name may be found. As a rule the inclusive pagination is given instead of the first page or the one on which the generic name appears, in order to indicate to some extent the length of the description and thus give a clue to the detail with which the group is treated.

Nearly every reference has been verified, and in the majority of cases checked independently by two persons, so as to eliminate as far as possible errors due to copying. It is difficult to appreciate the time, labor, and energy expended to secure accuracy in this respect. Special trips have been made to libraries in distant cities in this country, and my assistant has visited the principal libraries in Bergen, Berlin, London, and Paris in the quest for rare books. Still, in a few instances, it has been necessary to take references to inaccessible works at second hand, but these are quoted or accompanied by a statement of the authority from which they have been derived.

DATES.

The determination of the date of publication is one of the most important points connected with nomenclature, as it is the foundation of all matters respecting priority of names. In a technical sense the publication of a book or paper is distinct from the date of printing and practically synonymous with distribution.^a Publication is defined by the Century Dictionary as "The act of offering a book, map, print, piece of music, or the like, to the public by sale or by gratuitous distribution." According to the late Dr. Coues, "A printed work is 'published' if a single copy is placed in a public library."^b Although it is a general rule that the date of publication is to be accepted unless there is evidence to show that it is incorrect, yet it must be remembered that many scientific papers, particularly monographs and elaborate works, are published in parts, and when these parts are gathered in volumes the date on the title page is, in most cases, simply that of the last brochure. Such publications, therefore, have both a real and an apparent date—the real date being the time of publication of the separate parts; the apparent date that on the title page. These two dates may vary several months or even years, as in the case of the 'Proceedings of the U. S. National Museum,' 'Proceedings of the Zoological Society of London' for 1850, or the 'Transactions of the Zoological Society of London.' An extreme case is that of Pallas'

^a See Allen, 'Science,' N. S., IV, 691, 838, 1896.

^b Coues, in Allen's Mon. N. Am. Pinnipeds, p. 254, footnote, 1880.

'Zoologia Rosso-Asiatica,' quoted by some authors as 1811 and by others as 1831. This discrepancy in dates is due to the fact that the work was partially distributed in 1811, but not completed until twenty years later. New genera and species described in such works, if quoted from the date of completion, may be incorrectly considered synonyms of other names which really appeared later.

Since, as already mentioned, a difference of a few months or even a few days may determine the acceptance or rejection of a name, it is important to ascertain, with as much accuracy as possible, the exact date of publication, and no effort has been spared to attain this object. In the present index, when the real date differs from the apparent date, both are cited, the latter being given in parentheses or in the form 'for 1850', etc., followed by the real date at the end of the reference. In recent years considerable labor has been expended in ascertaining the dates of publication of some of the more important zoological works, and several special papers on this subject have been published, chiefly by Richmond, Sclater, Sherborn, and Waterhouse. These papers are as follows:

AUTHORITIES AND LOCALITIES.

AUTHORITIES.

Special care has been taken to credit each name to its proper author, but in a few cases the original authority still remains in doubt. Occasionally genera have been accredited to the editor of a serial or work if the author's name does not appear, but for a few names published in the 'London Encyclopedia' even this was unattainable. Double citations of authorities have been given only where absolutely necessary, as in the cases of manuscript names, misprints, and emendations. For example, Tonatia is quoted as 'Gray in Griffith's Cuvier' for the reason that the name, while published by Griffith, is distinctly credited to Gray; Blainvillimys is given as 'Bravard (MS.) Gervais' since it is credited to Bravard, but dates from the time of its publication by Gervais. Similarly a few names in Pictet's 'Traité de Paléontologie' and other works are credited to the original authors, but quoted from ^a Examination by C. D. Sherborn of copy in Museum of Natural History, London.

^b Dates from F. H. Waterhouse, who obtained them from the Linnæan Society. Vols. XIII and XV were each published in two parts and Vol. XIV in three parts.

the authority by whom they were first published. Misprints and emendations are sometimes given in the form 'Kolus (A. Smith) Gray' in order to connect the changed spelling with the original name.

LOCALITIES.

In modern systematic work the statement of the type locality of a species is considered almost as important as the reference to the original description. An attempt has been made, therefore, to give such information as is available concerning the locality of the type species of each genus, but with only fairly satisfactory results. In the case of genera based on American species, and especially those based on North American species, the type localities are usually stated with some degree of precision; but in the case of genera based on Old World species the statements concerning localities are often indefinite and may consist simply of the name of the country or the region in which the species is known to occur. In the case of extinct groups the statement may mention simply the bed or formation in which the remains have been found, but to readers familiar with the paleontology of the region this will often be clearer than reference to the nearest town, river, or mountain. The statement, if any, concerning the locality in the original description has been generally followed unless too indefinite or known to be erroneous, but subsequent information has been freely used in throwing light on obscure type localities. Not only have the places been given with as much precision as possible, but they have been looked up and, when necessary, enough explanation has been added to facilitate finding most of them on any good, modern map. While much remains to be done in determining the exact localities from which species have been described, particularly in the case of Old World mammals, the statements given are as complete as the information at hand would permit.

TYPES AND THEIR DETERMINATION.

Great importance was formerly attached by some zoologists to the definition of a genus, and the late Prof. Cope even went so far as to declare that a genus proposed by merely naming the species on which it was based (a 'typonym') was not entitled to recognition. But, as Dr. Gill explains:^a

The demand in such case is simply that the definition shall be made. It may be inaccurate or not to the point; it may be given up at once, and never adopted by the author himself afterwards, or by anyone else. Nevertheless, the condition is fulfilled by the attempt to give the definition. . . . Certainly it is more rational to accept a typonym than to require a definition for show rather than use. Nevertheless, I fully recognize the obligation of the genus maker to indicate by diagnosis, as well as type, his conception of generic characters.

^aProc. Am. Ass. Adv. Sci., XLV, 1896, sep., pp. 20-21.

In a few instances genera have been defined without mention of any species, but fortunately such cases are extremely rare in mammalogy. Examples may be found in Amblysomus Pomel, 1848, and Chalcochloris^a Mivart, 1867, two names for a subgenus of South African golden moles. No species were mentioned in the original descriptions, and no specific names seem to have been coupled with Amblysomus until 1879^b and none with Chalcochloris until 1883.

The term type^c as now understood was unknown a century ago, and the importance of designating some one species on which the description of the group had been based was not appreciated by the older naturalists. A genus may contain ten or more species which subsequently are found to represent as many different genera or subgenera. Under such circumstances it becomes of the utmost importance to determine which one should bear the name of the original group. To determine this point is often an exceedingly difficult matter and in complicated cases can only be settled after a full consideration of the facts by one who is engaged in monographing the group or who is thoroughly familiar with the history of the species involved.

As Dr. Dall has well said, "No arbitrary rule will suffice to determine, offhand, questions of so much complication as is often the decision in regard to the type of an ancient genus which has been studied by a number of authors."^d

To meet the difficulties which frequently arise several methods of procedure have been proposed. The most important of these are:

- (1) Selection of the first species.
- (2) The species selected by the first reviser of the group.
- (3) The species, if any, whose name has subsequently become the designation of a genus.
- (4) Elimination (especially as restricted by Canon XXIII of the A. O. U. Code).

^aOriginally spelled Calcochloris.

^bTrouessart, Revue et Mag. Zool., 3^e ser., VII, 277, 1879.

^cA type is the identical individual specimen from which a species has been described. To meet the demands of modern systematists Thomas has proposed the following terms for specimens more or less closely associated with the original type:

Cotype: "One of two or more specimens together forming the basis of a species, no type having been selected."

Paratype: "A specimen belonging to the original series, but not the type, in cases where the author has himself selected a type."

Topotype: "A specimen simply collected at the exact locality where the original type was obtained."

Metatype: "A specimen received from the original locality after the description has been published, but determined as belonging to his own species by the original describer himself."—Proc. Zool. Soc. London, 1893, 242.

See also Schuchert, 'What is a Type in Natural History?', Science, new ser., V, 636-640, Apr. 23, 1897; and Merriam, Ibid, pp. 731-732, May 7, 1897.

^dNomenclature in Zoology and Botany, Rept. to the Am. Ass. Adv. Sci., p. 40, 1877.

The first two methods date back to the 'Stricklandian Code' of 1842, known also as the 'Rules of the British Association.' Both have been generally advocated and more or less generally followed, but both are beset by serious objections. The simple rule of adopting the first species as the type fails signally when applied to Linnæan genera, some of which seem to have their types concealed in the middle of a list of species. Thus the type of Mustela would become M. lutris, the sea otter; of Mus, M. porcellus, the guinea pig; and of Cervus, C. camelopardalis, the giraffe. The adoption of the verdict of the first reviser is open to the objection of leaving too much to personal opinion in determining what constitutes revision (monographing the group or merely enumerating the species). Moreover, there is always the difficulty of actually determining which author was really the first to revise the group, and if the one whose verdict has been generally accepted proves to have been anticipated by another of different views, change and consequent shifting of names are inevitable.

The third method was advocated by Prof. Alfred Newton^a about thirty years ago and has recently been adopted by a number of American zoologists,^b as a rule, in the following form: "A generic name which is the same as that of an explicitly included species (or a cited post-Linnæan synonym of such species) takes that species as its type regardless of subsequent elimination." This method is open to no serious objection and disposes satisfactorily of a certain class of cases which, however, are rather limited in number.

The fourth method, that of elimination, is applicable when others fail, but should be used with the restrictions provided by Canon XXIII of the A. O. U. Code (p. 43). "If, however, the genus contains both exotic and non-exotic species—from the standpoint of the original author—and the generic term is one originally applied by the ancient Greeks or Romans, the process of elimination is to be restricted to the non-exotic species."

Recently Dr. Jordan,^c in discussing the determination of types, recognized three general methods: Following the arrangement of the original author, elimination, accepting the type designated as such by the original author. In the last case the question is very simple, as the statement can not be reversed by any subsequent writer. If no type is designated he favors adopting the first species as such, with certain exceptions. The five principles which he has formulated for guidance in determining types are as follows: (1) The species designated as such by its author; (2) the first species referred to the genus, or the species standing first on the page if no type is designated explicitly or otherwise; (3) in the case of Linnæan genera, the best known European or 'official' species of the genus; but in case of doubt, the first species; (4) the species, if any, which has furnished the name of the genus, provided it be mentioned by the author of the genus; (5) in case of old generic names restricted by common consent to a species not the first mentioned by the author, such species may be accepted as the type to avoid confusion, provided the restriction antedates any modern names for the same genus.

As already stated, an attempt was first made in the preparation of this index to fix the type of each genus, but afterwards abandoned in favor of the expedient of enumerating all the species included in the genus by the original describer and marking the one indicated as the type by a subsequent reviser of the group.

The types of practically all the genera proposed by Linnæus have been fixed by modern workers: those published by Brisson have been fixed by Merriam;^a those adopted by Kerr and Oken have been determined by Allen;^b those proposed by Gloger have been fixed by Thomas;^c those of marsupials and monotremes have also been given by Thomas;^d those of antelopes by Scater and Thomas;^e those of existing genera of South African mammals by W. L. Scater;^f those of recent North American genera by Merriam, Allen, Miller, Bangs, and Bailey; those of most of the extinct genera by O. P. Hay;^g and many scattered types have been fixed by specialists. Thus the type species of the great majority of existing genera are now determined with some degree of precision.

HYPOTHETICAL GENERA.

The term 'hypothetical genera' is here used to include genera which are based on characters assumed to have been possessed by mammals still unknown. Probably in no other branch of zoology has this device of completing the paleontological record been so freely used. Nearly fifty hypothetical genera of mammals have been published during the last fifteen years, chiefly by Cope, Haeckel, and Ameghino. These genera have been proposed to fill gaps in certain groups or to indicate the generalized types from which known genera are supposed to have been derived. Several were intended to close the gap between man and the higher apes; others to indicate ancestral Primates, Carnivores,

CHANGES IN FORM OF NAMES.

EMENDATIONS.

Probably no section of the A. O. U. Code has been the subject of so much criticism as Canon XL, which provides that "the original orthography of a name is to be rigidly preserved, unless a typographical error is evident."^a Stability and priority are two of the cardinal principles under the Code, but priority is merely a means of securing stability, and applies as well to the adoption of the earliest name as to the earliest form of that name. Experience has shown that any other course leaves the door wide open to emendation and resultant confusion.

^a See Elliot, 'Canon XL, A. O. U. code,' Auk, XV, 294-298, 1898, and Allen, 'A defense of Canon XL of the A. O. U. code,' ibid., pp. 298-303. On emendation of names, see also Gill, Proc. Am. Ass. Adv. Sci., XLV, 1896, sep., pp. 9-10; Sclater, Proc. Zool. Soc. London, 1896, 313; Stebbing, Zoologist, 1898, 423-428.

How a generic name should be spelled may seem a comparatively unimportant matter, but questions of correct form have in certain cases proved very fruitful of discussion. Appropriateness and philological elegance in scientific names are duly appreciated, but are less important than permanence. Correcting misspelled or badly formed words causes more confusion than preservation of the original form.^a Consequently emendations of all kinds are ignored except by the comparatively few authors, who refuse to adopt a name which they consider misspelled, even though they may differ among themselves as to the correct form. This diversity of opinion exists not only in the case of words of barbarous origin, but also in those derived from classical roots that offer a choice in forming compounds. The term 'variants' is here used to cover the various forms of names.

Variants are properly of two kinds—emendations and misprints; but it is often difficult to tell whether a particular form of a word is a correction or is simply a misspelling, due to inadvertence. In the present list special care has been taken to preserve the original spelling of every name, and to give the more important variations.

Emendations.—Some of the variants which are likely to prove most troublesome are those involving a change in the initial letter in transforming Greek derivatives into Latin, alteration in a diphthong, insertion of h, and substitution of c for k. Egocerus has been corrected to Ægocerus; Ailurus, to Ælurus; Aplocerus, to Haplocerus; Reithrodon, to Rhithrodon; Rytina, to Rhytina; Kobus, to Cobus; Nesokia, to Nesocia. Greek endings and diphthongs are similarly modified to convert them into Latin form. Hipposideros becomes Hipposiderus; Cheiomys, Chiromys; Pithecheir, Pithechirus or Pithecochirus. Preferences in spelling are illustrated by such alterations as Allactaga to Alactaga, and Ratelus to Ratellus. Still more radical changes have been proposed, such as emending Aodon to Anodon, Megacerops to Megaceratops, and Megatherium to Megalotherium. It has even been suggested that Cælogenys should be transformed into Genyscælus, on the ground that the Latin form Cælogenus is an inaccurate transliteration, since the Latin u does not correspond to the Greek upsilon, and that therefore the roots should be reversed in order to obtain a proper ending. To illustrate the extent to which emendation may be carried, the modifications of 6 names are given below; but the most remark-

HERRERA'S MODIFIED GENERIC NAMES.

Perhaps the most radical and most remarkable system of emendation ever suggested is that proposed by Prof. A. L. Herrera. He proposed to modify all existing generic names in such a way that the first syllable and the ending should indicate the class and the kingdom to which the genus belonged; names of animals to have masculine endings, those of plants feminine endings, and those of minerals neuter endings; and the class to be indicated by prefixing the first syllable of the class name. Thus all generic names of mammals would begin with Mam, those of birds with Ave, those of reptiles with Rep, those of batrachians with Batr, and those of fishes with Pis. For full details of this scheme of nomenclature the reader is referred to Herrera's papers.^b The only modifications of mammal names published in the first paper are those in the following list:

^aBeside these emendations, an almost indefinite number of anagrams can be formed from the original word Aplodontia.

MISPRINTS.

No special effort has been made to collect misprints, for an attempt to index systematically the multitude of misspelled names which occur in scientific works and serials would be an endless undertaking. Many misprints, however, which have come to light in compiling the index, particularly those in standard catalogues and lists, have been preserved. Occasionally it is impossible to tell whether a word is a misprint or an emendation; and some misprints are not only unrecognizable (as Buncelurus for Bunælorus), but exceedingly troublesome (as Chæropotamus for Chæropsis),^a since they seem to be new names or take forms which may be subsequently proposed for valid genera. Such are Cystophoca for Cystophora, Desmatocyon^b for Cynodesmus, Eotomys for Evotomys, Hyohippus for Hypohippus, Jacalius for Sacalius, Juncus for Sunkus, Lagocetus for Lagenocetus, Microtolagus for Macrotolagus, Perascalops for Parascalops, and Scapasius for Scapanus.

Although it would seem that obvious misprints should have no status in nomenclature, yet several cases have arisen in which the decision has been otherwise, and the way seems to be opened to giving them undue importance. Much confusion is likely to arise if, as has sometimes happened, they are adopted to replace preoccupied names or are relied upon to establish the validity of names which would otherwise be considered preoccupied. This point may be made clearer by a few examples of generic names of fishes and mammals.

In ichthyology variants of Thynnus and Orcynus have been proposed to replace the names from which they have been derived because the latter are preoccupied. In 1817 Cuvier proposed two subgenera of Scomber (Thynnus and Orcynus), which were subsequently combined by many ichthyologists under the name Thynnus. In 1861 Gill replaced Thynnus by Orycnus, due simply to a misreading of the name Orcynus, and subsequently replaced it by Orcynus in its proper form. In 1863 Dr. J. G. Cooper recognized the two groups of Cuvier, adopting Orycnus Gill (instead of Thynnus) for one and Orcynus for the other. In 1894 Gill showed that Thunnus of South, 1845, antedated Orycnus, and this name has been adopted by Jordan and Evermann.^a

^b Possibly an emendation and not a misprint.

In revising the group in 1889, Dresslar and Fesler stated the case as follows:

The name Orycnus was first used by Dr. Gill in 1862. It was due to a misreading of Cuvier's name Orcynus and it should be placed in the category of emendations of that name. If the name itself is preoccupied, erroneous or various spellings of it due to misprints, misreadings, or purism ought to be preoccupied also. Orcynus had been previously used when Cuvier gave it as the name of the long-finned Tunnies. To spell it Orycnus does not save it. . . . The name Orycnus Cooper, it seems to us, is preoccupied by its previous use for another genus or subgenus by Gill. It is, therefore ineligible. In other words, a generic name originating in a misprint of a well-known name can not be later used as the name of another genus.^b

The opposite view, however, was taken by Dr. Gill, who in the same year comments on the case as follows:

As Thynnus is preoccupied in insects, the name Orycnus, applied by Gill to the same type, may perhaps be retained although founded on a mistake. . . . The present author would have been glad if the name Orycnus could have fallen into 'innocuous desuetude,' but inasmuch as it had been specifically and with malice prepense resurrected and proposed for retention by Cooper, it must surely be retained for the genus comprising the Tunny and Albicore.^c

Later, in 1894, he proposed to adopt Thunnus on the following grounds:

The name Thunnus was thus suggested and used as a substitute for Thynnus and as sufficiently distinct from the latter; it has classical sanction, the form Thunnus being the regular one and preferred by many scholars to Thynnus. Thunnus, it is true, is a mere variant of Thynnus, but, being a variant, it is different and as different, was formally introduced as a substitute for Thynnus. By most American ichthyologists it will therefore be accepted.^d

Similar cases have occurred in the generic names of mammals. Recently Waite in proposing the name Thylacomys for an Australian mouse, called attention to an obscure name given by Owen many years previously to a group of marsupials, but contended that because the latter was spelled Thalacomys (an obvious misprint), it did not preoccupy his name. Subsequently it was shown that Owen's name was in reality first printed Thylacomys, but it appeared in one publication and the description in another, so that the name might be considered a nomen nudum. It had, however, been used afterwards in correct form in connection with a marsupial prior to its application to a mouse. Waite thereupon admitted that his Thylacomys was preoccupied and replaced it by a new name. Thomas, while admitting the claims of Owen's name, with characteristic caution preferred to adopt the evident misprint, Thalacomys, which was published with a description, instead of the correct and really earlier Thylacomys.

In Wallace's 'Geographical Distribution,' published in 1876, Necomys is given by mistake as Neotomys. The accompanying species indicate that Necomys is intended. Fourteen years later, in 1890, Thomas proposed Neotomys as a distinct genus. The question arises, Shall Wallace's Neotomys be recognized as preoccupying the later and otherwise valid generic name?

Thomas in 1896 proposed the name Craurothrix to replace Echiothrix Gray, 1867, because the latter was preoccupied by Echinothrix Peters, 1853. In 1898, however, he abandoned Craurothrix on the ground that Echiothrix was sufficiently distinct from Echinothrix.^a Recently he has also maintained that the misspelled form in which Stenorhynchus was first published was sufficient to protect it against preoccupation. He says the "original and still well-known name was spelt Stenorhinchus on its first publication in 1826, and I hold that the name is not invalidated by the Stenorhynchus or Stenorynchus of earlier authors."^b

A striking example of the results of carrying out this theory to an extreme is shown in the case of the African barbets. The genus Pogonias was described by Illiger in 1811, based on Bucco dubius. In 1815 Leach^c described three additional species, which he named Pogonia sulcirostris, Pogonia lævirostris, and Pogonius vieilloti. He also referred incidentally to lævirostris as Pogonias lavirostris, thus using the genus in three different forms in the same volume. These three species now stand as Pogonorhynchus dubius (= sulcirostris), Melanobucco bidentatus (= lævirostris), and M. vieilloti. Pogonorhynchus, proposed in 1833, is now used instead of Pogonias, the latter being preoccupied by Pogonias Lacépède, 1800, a genus of fishes. Melanobucco was described in 1889, the type being bidentatus (= lævirostris). If Stenorhinchus is sufficiently distinct from Stenorhynchus, Pogonia is certainly different from Pogonias, and the various forms of the name published in 1815 ought to be available as valid names. It may therefore be claimed that Pogonia used with sulcirostris has precedence as an earlier name for the genus now known as Pogonorhynchus, and Pogonius used with vieilloti as the earliest name applied to the group Melanobucco.

If misprints are to be given such importance as indicated in these examples, Neotomys Thomas, 1890, must be considered preoccupied, Cystophoca is barred forever as a generic name, and some misspelling found in an obscure reference is likely to become the proper designation for each group whose name is preoccupied.

REJECTION OF NAMES.

Many names which now pass current were refused recognition by some of the older zoologists, owing to derivation from barbarous roots, or, where derived from Latin or Greek roots, because of being compounded in violation of classical rules. This action was based on certain principles of nomenclature laid down by Linnæus in 1751 in his 'Philosophia Botanica.' Illiger,^a among others, regularly renamed genera derived from native words and gave a list of the names he rejected according to the rules of Linnæus. He discarded hybrids, such as Hydrogallina (223);^b compounds of a syllable of one word with the whole of another, as Melursus (224); genera formed by prefixes, as Perameles (225), or suffixes, as Balænoptera and Delphinapterus (227); words ending in oides, as Talpoides (226); adjectives used as substantives, as Candidovrulus, Mellivora, Setifer (235); 'sesquipedal' names, or names difficult to pronounce, as Hyperoodon (249); names based on a misconception of characters, as Monodon (232); names derived from terms used in anatomy or the arts, as Arvicola, Lotor, Spectrum (231). It is scarcely necessary to say that none of these rules are recognized in modern codes and none of the names mentioned are rejected merely on account of their construction. Some modern authors even preserve native names and advocate their general adoption (see pp. 45-46). The A. O. U. Code provides (Canon XXXI) that "Neither generic nor specific names are to be rejected because of barbarous origin, for faulty construction, for inapplicability of meaning, or for erroneous signification."

According to this Code, generic names can be rejected on only three grounds, viz, (a) because they are preoccupied; (b) because they are nomina nuda; (c) because they are indeterminate, through lack of type or insufficient definition (Canons XXXIII, XXXIV, XXXVI). For present purposes it will be more convenient to consider rejection of names under six divisions, viz, preoccupied names, nomina nuda, indeterminate names, French and common names, plural subgeneric names, and names of genera that properly belong in other classes.

PREOCCUPIED NAMES.

"A homonym is one and the same name for two or more different things."^c Generic homonyms arise in two ways: (1) Through ignorance or inadvertence; (2) through transfer or change of type. These two causes of origin may be illustrated by the following examples: Psammomys was originally applied by Cretzschmar in 1828 to a group of gerbilles (Gerbillinae) of northeast Africa. The same name was proposed by Le Conte in 1830 for a group of meadow mice (Microtinæ) from Georgia, and by Pæppig in 1835 for a group of octodonts (Octodontinæ) from Chile. Both Le Conte and Pæppig were evidently ignorant of the previous use of Psammomys at the time their descriptions were published. Orca was applied by Wagler in 1830 to a group of toothed whales, including Delphinus bidentatus and D. desmaresti, while Tursio was used by him for Delphinus peronii from the southern seas. Gray in 1846 adopted Delphinapterus for the latter species and transferred the name Tursio to another group of dolphins typified by Delphinus tursio from the North Atlantic and North Sea. In both these cases the names used by the later authors are homonyms, proposed inadvertently in the case of Psammomys and intentionally in the case of Tursio. The extent to which such homonyms have been published has not been generally appreciated. About 150 useless names are attributable to this source alone, and most of them would not have been published if their authors had used more care or had had access to a fairly complete list of the genera of mammals already proposed. A full list of the duplicated names is given below, and one of the objects of this index will have been attained if such duplication of mammal names is avoided in future.

^a Prod. Syst. Mamm. et Avium, pp. xvii-xviii, 1811.

^b These numbers refer to the rules of Linnæus' 'Philosophia Botanica.'

Besides this duplication within the class Mammalia, many more names have been proposed which have been previously used in other classes, so that the total number of preoccupied names constitutes a very appreciable percentage of the total number of generic names. Canon XXXIII of the A. O. U. Code declares that "a generic name is to be changed which has been previously used for some other genus in the same kingdom." Simple as this statement is, it has probably given rise to more discussion and to more changes of names than any other rule in the Code, merely because of differences in its interpretation.

In the acceptance and use of names some zoologists disregard the rule entirely, but of those that recognize its validity some apply it only to names previously used in the same class, others only to names which are identical in spelling, and still others to names derived from the same roots. The first of these interpretations is obviously out of accord with the rule. The second is perhaps open to question, but the test being merely identity of spelling there can be no difficulty in its application, even in the rare cases of names of the same form but of different meanings, due to different derivations, as, for example, Neomys Kaup, 1829 (νέω, to swim; μῦς, mouse), and Neomys Gray, 1873 (νέος, new, μῦς, mouse). The chief differences in opinion have arisen in the application of the last class of interpretations, which includes names of the same derivation, but with slight differences in form due to gender, choice of connecting vowel of compound words, or presence or absence of aspirates. Some eminent zoologists maintain that a difference of a single letter in two names is sufficient to prevent the later one from being preoccupied, and cite such cases as Picus and Pica, Galeus and Gale, in support of their position. It is generally admitted that these names should all stand, since they are taken from classical words which were originally applied to very distinct organisms; and the validity of this argument is generally recognized in spite of Principle V of the A. O. U. Code, which declares that "a name is only a name, having no meaning until invested with one by being used as the handle of a fact, and the meaning of a name so used in zoological nomenclature does not depend upon its signification in any other connection." While the question of derivation does not necessarily enter into the availability of a name, it may serve a useful purpose as a guide in deciding whether names are preoccupied or not, as will be seen by some of the examples cited later. A large number of names comprise derivatives and compounds of the same Greek or Latin words. These names may have different forms:

(a) According to gender, as Otostomus, Otostoma, Otostomum. Otostomis Menke, 1830, a mollusk; Otostomus Beck, 1837, a mollusk; Otostoma Carter, 1856, a protozoan; Otostomum Ehrenberg, 1872, a protozoan, all evidently derived from the same Greek words, οὖς, ear, and στόμα, mouth.

(b) According to the particular Greek dialect from which the words have been selected, as Lampronessa and Lampronetta. Both these names are compounds of λαμπρός, splendid, and νῆττα, duck; but in the former the Epic or Ionic form, νῆσσα, is used and in the latter its Attic equivalent, νῆττα.

(c) According to whether the original Greek form has been preserved or whether it has been transliterated into Latin form, as Hipposideros and Hipposiderus.

(d) According to whether the Greek aspirate has been preserved or not, as Abrothrix and Habrothrix; Reithrodon and Rhithrodon.

(e) According to whether the connecting vowel i or o has been used in compounding two classical roots, as Callorhinus and Callirhinus.

It is therefore possible to make a number of compounds from the same words, all meaning the same thing, and differing from one another simply by a letter or two. This may be illustrated by compounds of καλός,^a beautiful, and μῦς, mouse. The following list contains no less than 16 variations compounded from these words in accordance with classical rules, two of which, Calomys and Callomys, have actually been proposed for different genera of mice.

Calimys.	Calimus.	Kalimys.	Kalimus.
Calomys.	Calomus.	Kalomys.	Kalomus.
Callimys.	Callimus.	Kallimys.	Kallimus.
Callomys.	Callomus.	Kallomys.	Kallomus.

^a See also footnote under Callidon, p. 151.

These 16 variations of 'beautiful mouse' are all available as valid generic designations of mammals (if applied to different animals), according to those who "regard all generic names as different unless originally spelled alike."^a

In common English no difference is recognized between enclosure and inclosure, gray and grey, meter and metre, program and programme, theater and theatre, and similar words. Generic names derived from the same words in the same way, and therefore having the same meaning, even though differing in gender or connecting vowel, should likewise be considered identical. For the sake of expediency or that there may be an ironclad rule which all may follow, the opposite course is adopted by some writers, but agreement in the matter seems almost impossible. A list is here given of 43 actual cases which occur in mammalogy and ornithology.

Dr. Gill states his position as follows: "I agree with those who think that even a difference of a single letter in most cases is sufficient to entitle two or more generic names so differing to stand. The chemist has found such a difference not only ample, but most convenient to designate the valency of different compounds, as ferricyanogen and ferrocyanogen. I am prepared now to go back on myself in this respect." (Proc. Am. Ass. Adv. Sci., XLV, pp. 15-16, 1896.)

The late Professor Marsh, in explaining his reasons for retaining Titanotherium, says:

The generic name Titanotherium Leidy is antedated by Menodus Pomel [1849]. The latter, however, is essentially the same word as Menodon von Meyer 1838, and is also objectionable in its form; hence Titanotherium should be retained.^a

This action was endorsed by Professor Osborn.^b Professor Cope, who was originally an ardent supporter of the validity of names differing by one letter, modified his attitude shortly before his death, so far as to change some of his names which he feared might be considered preoccupied. Referring in 1894 to his own genus Calamodon, proposed twenty years before, he said:

A genus of birds has been named Calamodus [by Kaup, in 1829], a name which is in my opinion abundantly distinct from Calamodon. As, however, there are persons who, like the American Ornithologists' Union, will make this resemblance an excuse for changing the name, I suggest that they call it Conicodon, from the shape of the molars as distinguished from those of Stylinodon.^c

In view of this divergence of opinion regarding preoccupied names, it has been deemed advisable to discuss the subject somewhat in detail, and in preparing the index to keep in mind the needs of various workers. Special care has been taken to refer not only to the names which preoccupy mammal names, but also to designations which have been proposed to replace them. In marking names as preoccupied the author has not been governed by his personal views on the subject, but has endeavored rather to subordinate these to general utility. And before accepting the statement that a certain name is preoccupied, the reader is cautioned to consult such name and determine whether the statement coincides with his own views.

NOMINA NUDA.^a

Nomina nuda are generally regarded as having no standing in nomenclature, but it is not always easy to decide whether a name is a nomen nudum, except where it is published in a list. Ordinarily a genus is considered sufficiently characterized if its type species is mentioned, but in case the name of this type itself happens to be a nomen nudum the generic name has no standing until the species has been properly described. And if this generic name proves to be preoccupied and another one is substituted for it, the substituted name is also a nomen nudum unless accompanied by a diagnosis or based on a recognizable species. If the nomen nudum afterward becomes available through description, reference to that description accompanies the generic name in the index and the name itself dates from this later publication. Thus Rhinosciurus Gray was published in 1843 with R. tupaoides from Singapore as the type. The specific name, however, was a nomen nudum and remained undefined until Blyth, in 1855, described the species as Sciurus tupaoides from a specimen taken in Malacca.^b In 1867 Gray again published the genus,^c but the type having been described in 1855, the genus may be considered to date from that year instead of 1843, the time of first publication, or 1867, the time of first publication after description of the type species. Some generic names which are practically nomina nuda have doubtless been admitted on the basis of a brief description, but such cases can be detected only by specialists who by working over the groups are in a position to decide whether or not the characters assigned constitute a recognizable description. The modern almost universal practice of mentioning some species with the genus tends to reduce the number of such names.

INDETERMINATE NAMES.

Rarer even than nomina nuda, but still worthy of special mention, are a few cases in which generic names have been given to animals that never existed. Examples of these are Sukotyro of Kerr, based on a mythical beast said to have been found in Java; Pamphractus of Illiger, based on Testudo squamata Bontius 1658, also accredited to Java but never identified with any animal, living or extinct; the equally unknown Hydropithecus Gloger 1841; and Rhinoceroïdes of Featherstonhaugh, based on a supposed fossil found in Somerset County, Pennsylvania, which proved to be only a fragment of rock.

FRENCH AND COMMON NAMES.

French names have given much trouble in preparing this index, owing to the fact that it has been a very common custom to quote them in Latin form, but with the date of their first publication as French words. Many of Cuvier's genera were first proposed under French names, and these were not Latinized until some years later. Obviously such names have no more claim to recognition than English, German, Arabic, or barbarous common names. But their similarity of form to Latin names, and the almost universal practice of treating them as such, make it sometimes difficult to ascertain their real date; and it may happen that in a few instances changes are necessary because such words are antedated by valid generic names. In order to bring out this point more clearly, references are given in the index both to the first publication in French and the first publication in Latin form, but the name takes its date from the latter publication. In a few uncertain cases French names have been given the benefit of the doubt and treated as Latin words in order to avoid the chance of necessitating undue change through the rejection of names which should properly be accepted.

The case of Priodon, a genus of edentates from Paraguay, is a good example of the uncertainty attached to names originally published in French form. Priodon is usually quoted as Cuvier 1822, but seems to have appeared in that year only in the form 'Priodonte.'^a In 1827 the name was used as a Latin word in the form Priodontes,^b but it does not seem to have been used in the form Priodon until 1831.^c In 1843 it was modified to Prionodon,^d a name which, however, had been proposed by Horsfield in 1824 for a genus of Viverridæ from Java. Recently Thomas, accepting the current date of Cuvier's Priodon, has adopted Linsang Müller 1839, instead of Prionodon Horsfield,^e on the ground that the latter is preoccupied by Priodon Cuvier 1822, although, as shown, Cuvier's genus does not seem to have been published in Latin form until 1827, three years after the publication of Prionodon Horsfield.

PLURAL SUBGENERIC NAMES.

Some authors have designated within a genus one or more subgeneric groups, and to the sections thus formed applied names in plural form. These names are occasionally quoted in the singular by other authors as valid subgenera or genera, being assigned to the author who originally formed the group, and dated from his publication. Thus Lydekker in 'Deer of all Lands,' 1898 (p. 125), quotes Palmatus Giebel, 1859, as one of the synonyms of Dama. Reference to Giebel's 'Säugethiere' shows that the name was originally published Palmati, including Cervus dama and C. somonensis. Wagner also recognized a number of subdivisions of Felis under plural names, e. g., Leoninae, Servalinae, and Tigrinae, and these have recently been revived by Grevé under the forms Leonina, Servalina, and Tigrina. The rule adopted in this index has been to ignore plural names as having no more status than common names unless subsequently used in the singular, when they date from the later author, although in such cases a reference to the earlier name is added. Following are a few of these names:

GENERA BELONGING TO OTHER CLASSES.

The last group of rejected names to be considered is that comprising those accompanied by descriptions and based on valid species, but now known to belong to groups other than mammals, and hence not properly entitled to a place in this index. These are mainly designations of certain fossils first described from fragmentary remains, the relationship of which could not be determined with certainty. This group contains two kinds of names: (a) Those given to forms originally described as bona fide genera of mammals; and (b) those given to forms referred to the class Mammalia through error. As examples of the last kind may be mentioned the reptilian genera Brithopus, Kladeisteriodon, and Orthopus, and the fish genus Wallago, which were inadvertently listed as mammals in the Nomenclators of Agassiz and Scudder. These names have not been admitted in the body of the index. Those belonging to forms described as mammals, however, are listed in their proper places with references to the explanations as to their true position. Altogether a score of such names must be rejected or rather transferred to other groups. As shown by the following list, nearly all of these names belong to reptiles, although two extinct birds of southern Patagonia were originally described as mammals, and one genus (Chirotherium) was doubtfully referred to the Mammalia or the Amphibia. Three genera—Caryoderma Cope, Tritylodon Owen, and Theriodesmus Seeley—have been considered mammals until very recently. The Mesozoic genera Theriodesmus and Tritylodon, although considered as representatives of the earliest ancestors of the Mammalia, have long been known to possess reptilian characters, and are now regarded as true reptiles.

ETYMOLOGY OF NAMES.

It is generally admitted that a name need not mean anything, and that in any case its meaning is of very slight importance from the standpoint of the systematic zoologist. According to the A. O. U. Code of Nomenclature, "a name is only a name, having no meaning until invested with one by being used as a handle of a fact; and the meaning of a name so used, in zoological nomenclature, does not depend on its signification in any other connection" (Principle V). In spite of this declaration, it will be found that most generic names have been bestowed for the sake of drawing attention to some characteristic or resemblance of the animal, fancied or real. They may contain many facts of interest, descriptive, geographical, or historical, and the knowledge of such derivation may be, and often is, an aid in keeping in mind the relationship of the group. Unfortunately, very few authors have taken the trouble to give etymologies or explain the application of their generic names.^a Agassiz gave derivations in his 'Nomenclator Zoologicus' and his example has been followed in this list, but the result is often unsatisfactory. In some cases it is almost impossible to tell what the derivation is, and in others the derivation may be clear, but the application very obscure. Some of the explanations are probably erroneous, but with no guide or hint from the author the determination of etymology is oftentimes little better than guesswork. Liddell & Scott's Greek-English Lexicon and Harper's Latin Dictionary have been followed for classical words, and liberal use has been made of the Century Dictionary. In a few cases the authorities have been given for explanations of barbarous names or those of unusual meaning.

ETYMOLOGY OF THE WORD 'MAMMAL.'

Before discussing the derivation of generic names it may not be out of place to refer briefly to the etymology of the word 'mammal,' which Dr. Theo. Gill^b has recently elaborated. One of the best authorities, the Century Dictionary, gives the following explanation of the word:

MAMMAL, a. and n. [=OF. mammal = Sp. mamal = Pg. mamal, mammal = It. mammale, n.; < NL. mammale, a mammal, neut. of LL. mammalis, of the breast, < L. mamma, the breast].

This derivation, as shown by Dr. Gill, is misleading:

The name mammalia was first coined and used by Linnæus in 1758, and was formed directly from the Latin; it had nothing to do with French, Spanish, Portuguese or Italian words. . . .

It was one of the happiest inspirations of Linnæus to segregate all the mammiferous animals—the hairy quadrupeds, the sirenians, and the cetaceans—in a single class. No one before had appreciated the closeness of the relations of the several types, ^aExceptions to the rule are Illiger, Owen, and Waterhouse, who explained the etymology of their names. Gaudry gives many derivations in his 'Enchainements du Monde Animal'. Dr. D. S. Jordan explains the etymology of all the mammal names which occur in his 'Manual of Vertebrates', and the late Prof. O. C. Marsh gave derivations in the lists of his new genera, published for private circulation, and also in Scudder's 'Nomenclator Zoologicus'. The application of many names will also be found in Beddard's 'Mammalia', 1902.

^b'The Story of a Word—Mammal,' Pop. Sci. Monthly, LXI, pp. 434-438, Sept., 1902.

and there was no name for the new class (or concept) as there was for all the others.^a A name, therefore, had to be devised. It was another happy inspiration that led Linnæus to name the class mammalia. . . .

The name in question was evidently made in analogy with animalia. In animalia the principal component was anima, the 'vital principle' or animal life. . . . The singular of the word was animal. In mammalia, the essential component is mamma, breast; the singular should be mammal. . . . In fine, a mammal is a being especially marked by, or notable for having, mammae.

Not only had the name nothing to do with the alleged derivative Latin words, it was not admitted at all into the vernacular speech of France, Spain, Portugal or Italy. The naturalists and lexicographers of those countries failed even to appreciate its etymological aptness and beauty. First, the French had to introduce a new word to correspond—mammifères, or the breast bearers. The other Latin races followed; the Spanish and the Portuguese with mamíferos, and the Italians with mammiferi. None of the words quoted in the Century Dictionary are even given as nouns in the ordinary dictionaries of those languages—not even in the great dictionary of Littré. Littré, however, has the words mammalogie, mammalogique and mammalogiste.

Of course the Germans coined a word from their vernacular—Säugethiere, or suckling animals: the cognate nations imitated; the Dutch with Zoogdieren, the Swedish with Däggdjuren, and the Danes and Norwegians with Pattedyrene.

The first writer to use the English word 'mammals' to any extent was Dr. John Mason Good. In 'The Book of Nature' (1826), in the second lecture of the second series, 'On Zoological Systems,' he specifically introduces it. Quadrupeds is not appropriate 'and hence it has been correctly and elegantly exchanged by Linnæus for that of Mammalia,' and he concludes, 'as we have no fair synonym for it in our own tongue, I shall beg leave now, as I have on various other occasions, to render mammals.'

The earliest English author to use the singular form to any extent was Richard Owen. In his 'History of British Fossil Mammals and Birds' (1846), for example, he alluded to a mastodon as 'this rare British Fossil Mammal' (p. xxii), and he asserted that he knew 'of no other extinct genus of mammal which was so cosmopolitan as the mastodon' (p. xlii); he said that 'the Myrmecobius is an insectivorous mammal, and also marsupial' (p. 40), and he claimed, conditionally, that 'the Meles taxus is the oldest known species of mammal now living on the face of the earth' (p. 111).

SOURCES OF NAMES.

The great majority of generic names of mammals have been derived from the Greek, a few from the Latin, some from modern languages, and a considerable number from native or barbarous names. The proportion may, perhaps, be roughly estimated as follows: Greek, 70 percent; Latin, 5 percent; modern languages (exclusive of barbarous names), 2 percent; native names, 23 percent.

CLASSICAL NAMES.

Apparently every name of an animal used in classical Greek has been made to do service in modern nomenclature, and these have been modified until they form a large number of the designations in common use. The following list, while by no means complete, contains about 75 of the Greek names of mammals most commonly used:

^aThe assertion of Owen that Aristotle fully recognized the class of mammals under the name Zootoca is without proper foundation. Long ago, in the American Naturalist (VII, 458), I showed that different passages in Aristotle's books negatived such a statement, and that the word zootoka was not used as a substantive.

^a Besides these names a few Latin words, such as Arvicola, Lemur, Lotor, Manis, Mellivora, Mephitis, Putorius, Spectrum, etc., have come into common use as generic names, although they were not originally names of animals.

Words taken from modern languages are still fewer in number. From the French have been derived such names as Feresa, Genetta, Grampus, Guepardus, Muscardinus, Noctula, Palmista, Phalanger (originally from the Greek), Rangifer, Ratelus, Rorqual, Rousettus, Sagoinus, Sarigua, Tatusia, Vampyrus, and Verrusus; from the Italian Foina, Lontra, Pipistrellus, and Zibellina; from the Spanish Chinchilla (based on the native name) Nutria, and Zorilla; from the Portuguese Encoubertus; from the German Cricetus, Desman, Hamster, Vormela, and Zibetha; from the Dutch Poescopia; from the Scandinavian Alces, Lemmus, Narwhalus, and Rosmarus; and from the Russian Beluga and Saiga.

BARBAROUS NAMES.

The recognition of generic names derived from barbarous words has given rise to much discussion. Several of the older systematists refused to recognize them, and regularly substituted new ones for those which they considered barbarous. One of the Linnæan rules adopted by Illiger provides that generic names which have no root in the Greek or Latin languages should be rejected, and under it are enumerated 30 genera of mammals which he renamed,^a viz:

Aguti.	Fennecus.	Lori.	Potos.
Aluata.	Galago.	Kangurus.	Saguinus.
Anarnacus.	Gerbillus.	Kinkajou.	Tapirus.
Coati.	Giraffa.	Narwalus.	Tatu.
Coendu.	Hamster.	Ondathra [sic].	Tenrec.
Coescoes.	Indri.	Pongo.	Wombatus.
Desman.	Llacma.	Potorous.	Yerbua.
Dugong.	Lemmus.

Several later authors followed the same course, and Gloger in the preface of his 'Hand- und Hilfsbuch der Naturgeschichte,' p. vi, 1842, says:

Not a little trouble has been caused by the formation of new scientific names hereby rendered necessary, and by substituting for the older and grammatically incorrect terms the correct ones which in such cases precede the former. The very objectionable barbarisms daily increasing in the language, with which many English and more French naturalists corrupt zoological nomenclature, has made such a course of procedure necessary, particularly in a book designed for the classically educated youth of our higher institutions of learning.

On the other hand, some authors not only frequently employed barbarous names, but also advocated their use. Lacépède apparently never missed an opportunity to use them, while Lesson and Gray are responsible for the introduction of many native names. Liais even went so far as to suggest the substitution of native names for those of classical derivation under the plea that—

It would be incontestably in the interest of science to preserve names from those languages of South America which were spoken over a large extent [of country]

rather than to make new Latin names. If the Romans had known America, is it certain that the names made from their language would have been adopted by modern writers instead of those of the country (i. e., native names), especially when the endings were in accord with the rules of their language? At least the chances would have been in favor of the adoption of the latter, and in choosing them, there would be the double advantage of being logical and of not making 'neologisms.' (Climat du Brésil, p. 329, 1872.)

The objection to barbarous names has diminished of late, and many of those rejected by Illiger and others are now coming into general use for groups for which no earlier classical derivatives are available. Some of these words have been adopted practically without change, as for example:

Agouti.	Coendou.	Mara.	Serval.
Adjidaumo.	Galago.	Margay.	Sika.
Alouatta.	Guereza.	Memina.	Tatu. ^a
Avahi.	Indri.	Ochotona.	Tayassu. ^a
Babirussa.	Kerivoula.	Pudu. ^a	Tenrec.
Bondar.	Lama.	Rusa.	Vizcacia.
Chaus.	Linsang.	Saimiri.	Zebu. ^a

Others have been modified to give them Latin endings, as—

Baginia.	Conepatus.	Mangusta.	Salanoia.
Bandicota.	Fennecus.	Mazama.	Siamanga.
Barangia.	Jaguaris.	Nandinia.	Simenia.
Bettongia.	Kangurus.	Nesokia.	Suricata.
Cabassous.	Kiodotus.	Okapia.	Tapirus.
Cariacus.	Kobus.	Ouakaria.	Tupaia.
Coassus.	Manatus.	Potorous.	Unaüs.

'NONSENSE NAMES.'

Finally, reference should be made to names which have been 'coined' and which have no true derivation. These are merely arbitrary groups of letters sometimes known as 'nonsense names.' They have been proposed by authors who, like Ameghino, Gray, and Lataste, in making many names have found the usual sources insufficient or unsatisfactory. These names may be divided into two groups: (a) Coined or nonsense names, like Azema, Blarina, Degonia, Kogia, and Tatera, and (b) anagrams,^b such as—

Caliphrium from Licaphrium.	Diocartherium from Cardiotherium.
Cephanodus from Phenacodus.	Eirara from Eraria.
Chiroscaptor from Scaptochirus.	Genyscelus from Coelogenys.
Chochilius from Icochilus.	Glisorex from Sorexglis.
Colus from Suloc.	Ideodelphys from Eodidelphys.
Corsira from Corsair (?).	Lymodon from Mylodon.
Cutia from Acuti.	Machlydotherium from Chlamydotherium.
Decastis from Acdestis.	Magestus from Megastus.

^a The apparently barbarous form of words ending in u disappears if they are treated as Latin neuter nouns of the fourth declension, like cornu, genu, etc.

^b For some striking examples of anagrams in other classes, see Gill, Osprey, V, pp. 142-143, Sept., 1901.

Matyoscor from Myocastor.	Senonycteris from Nesonycteris.
Nephacodus from Phenacodus.	Teonoma from Neotoma.
Nopachtus from Panochtus.	Tonostylops from Notostylops.
Plohophorus from Hoplophorus.	Traspoatherium from Astrapotherium.
Rodiotherium from Diorotherium.	Utaetus from Eutatus.
Sadypus from Dasypus.	Xotodon from Toxodon.
Senodon from Nesodon.	Xotoprodon from Protoxodon.

KINDS OF NAMES.

MYTHOLOGICAL NAMES.

A considerable number of generic names are taken from mythology, both classical and Hindu, such as:

Acdestis.	Daunus.	Inuus.	Pontoporia.
Ægipan.	Diana.	Lamictis.	Prometheomys.
Aello.	Electra.	Lar.	Satyrus.
Alastor.	Eteocles.	Megæra.	Silenus.
Alectops.	Euphrosyne.	Menilaus.	Sivameryx.
Ammon.	Faunus.	Meriones.	Sivatherium.
Bramatherium.	Furia.	Midas.	Sphinx.
Calliope.	Gorgon.	Nestoritherium.	Sylvanus.
Calydonius.	Hamadryas.	Ocypetes.	Tideus.
Celæno.	Harpyia.	Œdipus.	Titanotherium.
Clorinda.	Ia.	Pan.	Vishnutherium.
Clymene.	Idomeneus.	Paniscus.

These are open to the objection that they are likely to have been used in other groups,^a thus necessitating change and consequent multiplication of synonyms.

GEOGRAPHICAL NAMES.

Geographical names have been used mainly in paleontology. In spite of the fact that they are mainly hybrid words, they have the advantage of convenience, as they are usually based on the type locality of one of the species. Such are:

Aethiops.	Cayluxotherium.	Libytherium.	Puelia.
Andinomys.	Cesserassictis.	Limognitherium.	Quercytherium.
Annamisus.	Colhuapia.	Missourium.	Ronzotherium.
Argyrocetus. ^b	Colhuelia.	Mœritherium.	Ruscinomys.
Argyrodelphis.	Cournomys.	Mouillacitherium.	Samotherium.
Argyrohippus.	Felovia.	Otronia.	Scaldicetus.
Argyrohyrax.	Felsinootherium.	Pampatherium.	Sinisis.
Argyrolestes.	Gergoviomys.	Paranomys.	Sivalarctos.
Atlantoxerus.	Helladotherium.	Pellegrina.	Sivalhippus.
Bachitherium.	Hydaspidotherium.	Perieromys.	Uintacyon.
Boneia.	Issidoromys.	Plataœomys.	Uintamastix.
Budomys.	Kasi.	Platatherium.	Uintatherium.
Burramys.	Lafkenia.	Poiana.	Urmiatherium.
Cadurcotherium.	Lelfunia.	Prominatherium.	Wynyardia.

^a Unless compounded with a name of a mammal, as for example Prometheomys.

^b Argyrocetus, meaning La Plata whale, ἀργυρος, silver, being used as the equivalent of the Spanish La Plata, silver.

PERSONAL NAMES.

Proper names have been utilized less, perhaps, for mammals than for some other groups, the total number, as shown in the following list, being about 80. Prior to 1850 only 11 such names had been proposed, but between 1864 and 1866 Gray added 11 more, and in the last four years (1899-1903) Ameghino has added 27. Of the total number, Gray has proposed 13 and Ameghino 33. Not only have eminent naturalists been honored in this way, but governors, diplomats, officers of the army and navy, and collectors have also been remembered.

COMPOUNDS.

A large proportion of modern generic names are compound words. Latin offers comparatively little opportunity for making compounds, and the number of such words is relatively small, although modifications by prefixes and suffixes are common. The Greek language lends itself almost as readily as the German to this kind of word making, and nouns are coupled together or modified by adjectives and prepositions in almost endless variety.^a Formerly compounds seem to have been in disfavor, for Illiger, in 1811, following Linnæus, rejected them, and quotes three Linnæan rules as authority for so doing:

225. N[omina] g[enerica] cui syllaba una vel altera præponitur (aut aufertur) ut aliud genus, quam antea, significet, excludendum est. Perameles. Promerops.

227. N. g. ex aliis nominibus genericis cum syllaba quadam in fine addita, conflata, non placent. Balenoptera, Delphinapterus.

226. N. g. in oides desinentia, e foro (zoologico) releganda sunt. Pelecanoides. Picoides. Talpoides. (Prod. Syst. Mamm. et Avium, p. xvii.)

It is difficult to understand this position, since compounds have the sanction of classical writers. Among numerous classical compound words which have been used as generic names of mammals may be mentioned Acanthonotus, Agricola, Camelopardalis, Cataphractus, Cynalopex, Hippopotamus, Hippotigris, Hydropotes, Nyctereutes, and Rhinoceros. At the present time compounds are considered not only unobjectionable, but highly desirable, for without them it would be almost impossible to coin designations for the ever-increasing multitude of genera and species without resorting to anagrams and arbitrary combinations of letters. They may have the advantage of indicating the relationship of a genus, and, what is even more important, of insuring it from being preoccupied in other groups. For example, compounds of Mus are usually restricted to rodents, and are not likely to be used in any class except mammals; the prefix eu is constantly used to distinguish the typical genus or subgenus from groups which are aberrant, in contradistinction to such prefixes as hemi- and para- or the suffix oides, which merely indicate resemblance; and the intensive za is used to call attention to some prominent or striking character.

Nowhere have compounds been more constantly and more effectually employed than in paleontology. Indeed, we have here a certain approximation toward the standard which Coues has pictured as the ideal name when he says—

^aA few genera have been made by combining words of Greek and Latin derivation, thus forming so-called 'hybrid names,' which are very generally (and very properly) looked upon with disfavor. Such are: Interodon, Interatherium, Luniodon, Nesciotherium; some taken from proper names, like Blainwillimys, Cuviermys, etc., and many of the geographical names. Such compounds, in the words of a recent writer, "are enough to make one's hair stand on end."

Systematic zoölogy, or the practice of classification, has failed to keep pace with the principles of the science; we are greatly in need of some new and sharper 'tools of thought,' which shall do for zoölogy what the system of symbols and formulæ have done for chemistry. We want some symbolic formulation of our knowledge. The invention of a practical scheme of classification and nomenclature, which should enable us to formulate what we mean by Turdus migratorius as a chemist symbolizes by SO_4H_2 what he understands hydrated sulphuric acid to be, would be an inestimable boon to working naturalists. (Key N. Am. Birds, 2d ed., 78, 1884.)

To a certain extent this is done in some paleontological names.

Thus words compounded with -therium, or with the prefixes amphi-, eo-, epi-, limno-, meso-, meta-, mio-, plesio-, plio-, and proto-, are almost always used for extinct genera^a and should be reserved exclusively for them. Prefixes may be briefly and conveniently used to express relationship. Amphicyon, Epicyon, and Pseudocyon, all indicate groups more or less closely related to the dogs; Cimolestes, a marsupial from the Cretaceous; Eohippus, Miohippus, and Pliohippus were proposed for horses which existed in the Eocene, Miocene, or Pliocene; Protodichobune for a type of artiodactyl which preceded, and Metadichobune for one which followed, Dichobune.

Pliohippus means an animal from the Pliocene related to the modern horse; Miosiren, an animal from the Miocene related to modern sire-nians; and Limnofelis, an animal found in an old morass and related to living cats, etc. Here the names give (a) the designation of the genus, (b) its geological position, and (c) its relationship; while their form indicates (d) that the genera are extinct.

In order to illustrate the great variety of compounds which can be made from one word, and at the same time to furnish a ready reference list which may be useful in coining new names, it has been deemed desirable to give the compounds of six of the words most frequently used in making generic names of mammals. These words are: $\gamma\alpha\lambda\tilde{\eta}$, weasel; $\acute{\iota}\kappa\tau\iota\varsigma$, weasel; $\mu\acute{\eta}\rho\nu\tilde{\xi}$, ruminant; $\mu\tilde{\upsilon}\varsigma$, mouse; $\nu\kappa\tau\epsilon\rho\acute{\iota}\varsigma$, bat; $\acute{o}\delta\acute{o}\upsilon\varsigma$, tooth. As will be seen by reference to the lists, the compounds of these words vary from 39 in the case of $\mu\acute{\eta}\rho\nu\tilde{\xi}$, to 350 in the case of $\mu\tilde{\upsilon}\varsigma$, and to more than 450 in that of $\acute{o}\delta\acute{o}\upsilon\varsigma$. In other words, about 8 percent of all the generic names of mammals are compounds of $\mu\tilde{\upsilon}\varsigma$ and more than 10 percent of the entire number are compounds of $\acute{o}\delta\acute{o}\upsilon\varsigma$.

^a There are a few exceptions, such as Amphiaulacomys, Amphisorex, Ceratotherium, Dorcattherium (originally applied to an extinct group since found to have living representatives), Eonycteris, Eosciurus, Eothenomys, Eozerus, Eozapus, Epinyx, Epiodon, Limnogale, Limnolagus, Mesobema, Mesocricetus, Mesomys, Mesoplodon, Metachirus, Miopithecus, Protoxerus, but the rule holds good in nine cases out of ten. The discrepancy in the case of eo is due to its double signification of 'eastern' when used for recent genera, and 'dawn' for extinct groups. Full lists of the genera with these 10 prefixes, aggregating about 180 names, will be found in the body of the 'Index.'

DOUBLE GENERIC NAMES.

A special class of compounds, which may be described as 'double generic names,' has been largely used in the case of mammals. Nearly 200 such names have been proposed, chiefly to denote resemblance or close relationship, and, when well chosen, serve the purpose admirably. They have the advantage of being self-explanatory, and are not apt to be preoccupied. They are ordinarily formed by combining two generic names into one, as Adapisorex and Cervalces, although some of them may be simply classical compounds of two names of animals, as Camelopardalis and Cynalopex. In either case the result is the same. Compounds of cyno (κύνω), gale, and myo (μῦς) are most frequent, as will be seen by reference to the following list:

APPLICATION OF NAMES.

Etymology in the widest sense of the term properly includes the application of names, but the latter subject is so broad as to merit special consideration. Although many generic names have been applied in such haphazard fashion or based on such apparently trivial or obscure characters that it is almost hopeless to attempt to explain their application unless the original author has furnished the key, still many others have been based on important characters or coined with a view of expressing relationships, indicating facts of distribution, or throwing light on their history, thus offering an interesting field for investigation. No attempt has been made to explain all obscure names, particularly those of extinct groups, but the object has been chiefly to show the application of the more important ones, especially in the case of North American mammals. The explanations given in the 'Century Dictionary,' the various recent works on mammals, and similar books of reference have been collected, and free use has been made of all sources of information which would throw light on the subject.

Apparently every conceivable character, external and internal, positive and negative, has been called into play in making generic names, and minute or imaginary resemblances have been utilized to such an extent that it is sometimes impossible to see the connection between the name and the animal even when the derivation is known. But the attempt to ascertain whether a certain term has originated in fact or fiction, or whether its application has been suggested merely by the fancy of the author, is at least interesting, and often successful. In classifying names, beginning with those which have an obvious application and passing to those which have none, at least ten subdivisions may be made: (1) classical names and their compounds; (2) native names; (3) geographical names; (4) personal names; (5) names indicative of age; (6) names indicating size, form, color, and resemblance; (7) names indicating habit and habitat; (8) names based on special characters; (9) names of fanciful or poetic application; (10) names founded on error or without application. These numerous subdivisions may be arranged under two main headings: (1) names of obvious application, comprising the first seven groups, and (2) names of obscure application, comprising the last three groups.

NAMES OF OBVIOUS APPLICATION.

(1) Classical names.—Words of classical derivation taken from names of animals (see p. 44), like Cebus, Gale, Mus, and Pithecus and compounded with such prefixes as eu (typical), amphi (on both sides), para (near), pseudo (false), za (intensive prefix), etc., need no special explanation. Similarly, words like Alticola (high dweller), Terricola (ground dweller), Hydropotes (water drinker), etc., suggest their own application. But in some cases old names of animals have been transferred to groups entirely different from those to which they originally belonged.^a Thus Dasypus is now applied to the armadillos, which do not occur in the Old World, and Cebus (from κῆβος, which meant any long-tailed monkey), is now restricted to neotropical monkeys, which were entirely unknown to the Greeks. The connection between this name and its apparent compounds Arctocebus, Habrocebus, Microcebus, and Nycticebus, all applied to Old World lemurs, is not clear, except on the theory that the latter are not compounds of the modern generic name, but of the original κῆβος. Similarly, most of the compounds of πίθηκος, ape, are applied to Old World groups, while the root word in the form Pithecia is transferred to a South American monkey.

(2) Native names.—Native names like Bandicota (pig rat) and Kerivoula (plantain bat) constitute one of the most interesting groups (providing their derivation can be ascertained), and they are usually based on such prominent characters that little explanation is required.

(3) Geographical names.—Geographical names (see p. 47) are in most cases self-explanatory merely from the derivation, but, as already mentioned, they are usually hybrid words and are sometimes compounds of little used names of localities, so that their application is not evident at first sight. Typical examples are Ruscinomys from Ruscino, the Roman name of the modern town of Perpignan in France; Kasi, a subgenus of monkeys from India, named from Kasi, the ancient designation of Benares, and Argyrocetus, 'silver whale' of Argentina, used in the sense of La Plata (silver) whale.

(4) Personal names.—Personal names (see pp. 48-51) fall into two categories—those derived from the name of the collector of the species on which the genus was based, like Brujnia, Carloameghinia, and Nelsonia, and those named in compliment to some distinguished person, as Garzon, for Don Eleazar Garzon, governor of the province of Cordoba, Argentina; Capaccinius, for Monsignor Francesco Capaccini, under secretary of state of Rome, and Romerolagus, for Don Matias Romero, formerly Mexican minister to the United States. In the first group the application is obvious, provided the person is stated as the collector; in the second group, however, the application is by no means evident, and without explanation is often very obscure.

(5) Geological names.—Names indicative of age, or ‘geological names,’ are frequently employed in paleontology to show the age of the deposits in which the animals were found. The most frequent are compounds of eo-, mio-, and plio-; thus Eopithecus, Miopithecus, and Pliopithecus represent apes from the Eocene, Miocene, and Pliocene. Similarly a few compounds have been made from cimo- and cæno-; thus Cimolestes, Cimolodon, and Cimolomys indicate mammals from the Cretaceous (chalk); and Cænobasileus, Cænopithecus, and Cænotherium, mammals from recent or Quaternary beds.^a The prefixes hyper- (above), infra- (below), proto- (first), pro- (before), meso- (middle), and post- (after), are also employed to represent relative age, as Hypertragulus, Infrapithecus, Protohippus, Promeles, Mesohippus, and Postpithecus. Occasionally names have been suggested by the character of the beds in which the fossils were discovered; thus Anthracothe-rium is a genus from the anthracite or lignite beds of Tuscany, Argillotherium one from the London clay, Chalicotherium one from the gravel beds of Eppelsheim, and Siderotherium one from the iron ore deposits near Mösskirch, Baden.

(6) Descriptive names.—Names indicative of size, form, color, and resemblance may be found in almost endless variety, and usually present few difficulties. Size is indicated in all gradations from the huge Megatherium to the pygmy Nannosciurus, but though the meaning of such names may be obvious, yet they convey no idea of absolute size to show that their selection is especially appropriate. Thus while Megamys plainly refers to a large rodent, it does not show that the mammal thus named was supposed to have been as large as an ox; and while Microcebus is a small lemur, the fact that some species of the genus are only 5 inches in length (exclusive of the tail) is not shown. Similarly ‘small shrew’ does not suggest the fact that Microsorex is in reality one of the smallest mammals, with a total length of only 3½ inches. Form is expressed in all gradations from fat (Steatomys) to thin (Stenobalæna); from thick (Pachysoma) to slender (Leptomys); from short (Brachytherium) to long (Dolichotherium). Color and markings play a comparatively unimportant part in the formation of generic names, but are used as a basis in a few cases. References to color in general are found in Celaenomys, Chrotomys, and Chrotopterus; to red in Erythrocebus, Erythrosciurus, and Rousettus; to white in Beluga, Leucas, Leucocyon, Leucomitra, Leucopleura, and Leucorhamphus; to greenish yellow in Chloromys; and to yellow in Chryseus, Chrysochloris, Chrysocyon, Chrysomys, Chrysonycteris, Chrysospalax, Chrysothrix, Icterus, and Xantharpyia. References to markings may be either to spots (Balionycteris, Rhinostictus, Spilogale), to stripes (Lemniscomys, Strigocuscus), to bands (Histriophoca, Tæniogale), or to a combination of colors (parti-colored) or markings (Pæciogale, Pæcilomys, Pæciophoca). General resemblance is indicated by compounds of oides, ops, and opsis (Petauroides, Dipodops, and Chæropsis), and by many double names of mammals, such as Antilocapra, Oribos, and Taurotragus.

(7) Miscellaneous names.—Habits and habitat form the basis of a great variety of names. Nearly every manner of progression is referred to directly or indirectly in the following examples: Creeping (Herpestes, Herpetomys), walking (Ocnobates), digging (Tachyorhynchus), groping about (Pselaphon), running (Dromedarius and Dromicia), flying (Pteromys), and swimming (Nectomys); living in the water (Hydromys), on land (Terricola), and underground (Hypogeomys). Habits and characteristics of various kinds are illustrated by Chiropotes (hand drinker), Hydropotes (water drinker), Nyctereutes (night hunter), and Oxygous (shrill wailing). Disagreeable odors are suggested by such names as Bdeogale, Mephitis, Ozolictis, Osmotherium, and Putorius. Character of habitat is often indicated by a prefix or suffix. Thus we have names of animals of the water (Hydrochærus, Hydrodamalis), sea (Halicore, Thalarchos), rivers (Hippopotamus, Potamocheirus), islands (Nesonycteris, Nesotragus), swamps (Helogale, Limnogale), rushes (Thryonomys), fields (Arvicola), gardens (Leimacomys), trees (Dendrolagus, Dryoryx), forests (Hylomys, Hylobates), plains (Pediotragus), pampas (Pampatherium), deserts (Xerospermophilus), sand (Ammospermophilus), rocks (Petrogale, Rupicapra), caves (Antrozous), heights (Hyperacrius), mountains (Oreotragus and Oreamnos), of snow and ice (Chionobates, Pagophilus), and torrid heat (Helarctos, Heliofoca). Finally, character of the food is sometimes expressed in the name, as when the animal feeds on seeds (Spermophilus), grain (Sitomys), rice (Oryzomys, Oryzoryctes), bark (Phlæomys), roots (Rhizomys), grass (Poebrotherium, Poephagomys, Poephagus), fruit (Carpomys, Carponycteris, Syconycteris, Trygenycteris), honey (Mellivora, Melurus), ants (Myrmecobius, Myrmecophaga), fish (Ichthyomys), or flesh (Sarcophilus and Sarcothraustes).

NAMES OF OBSCURE APPLICATION.

(8) Names indicating relationship.—Many names denoting relationship or based on general characters or habits require further explanation than mere derivation to render them intelligible. Thus, Mesomys (middle mouse) and Synaptomys (connecting mouse) are evidently intermediate forms, but the names alone do not show that Mesomys is related both to the jumping rats and Mus, or that Synaptomys is a connectant form between the lemmings and field mice. Aschizomys (not splitting—in the sense of connecting mouse), which, in a somewhat different way, expresses the same idea of connection, does not show that it is based on a combination of the characters of Microtus and Evotomys.^a Likewise, Orthriomys (early mouse) and Phenacomys (deceptive mouse) are not self-explanatory. Orthriomys was so called from the fact that it suggests an ancient type intermediate between Phenacomys and the Microtine Pedomys and Arvicola; Phenacomys derives its name from the fact that externally it is almost indistinguishable from Microtus. Hodomys (road mouse), refers to the animal's habit of making trails, and not, as might be supposed, to its living along highways. Monachus (monk) is applied to the tropical seal, probably because of its more or less solitary habits, and Semnopithecus (sacred monkey) to a group of monkeys of India, because the type species is considered sacred by the Hindus. Less clear are such terms as Cryptomys (hidden mouse), Dinomys (terrible mouse), and Xenomys (strange mouse), which merely suggest the peculiarities of the groups to which they belong without explaining them. Pectinator (comber) and Tamias (steward) convey little idea of their appropriateness unless it is known that Pectinator, like Ctenodactylus, has bristles on the hind feet which are supposed to be used in dressing the fur, and that Tamias, the well-known genus of ground squirrels, has a habit of laying up stores of food.

Generic names based on special characters are very numerous. They may refer to external characters, such as the skin, hair, head, nose, eyes, ears, tail, wings, or feet; to special characters of the teeth, skull, vertebræ, ribs, or limb bones; or to the soft anatomy. Those which owe their origin to characters of the teeth and skull are very common, while those based on the soft anatomy are comparatively rare. Not only do special parts of mammals suggest names, but a wide range of qualities of each part is represented in nomenclature. Thus, characteristics of the skin that give rise to names range from narrow (Stenotherium) to broad (Megaderma), probably in allusion to the size of the flying membranes; those of the hair from soft (Abrothrix) and woolly (Lagotherix—rabbit hair) to spiny (Echiothrix) and scaly (Lepitherium); those of the nose from allusions to a long nose (Nasalis and Oxymycterus) to noseless (Arhinolemur); those of the ears and tail from earless (Aotus) and tailless (Anoura) to large eared (Macrotis) and feather-tailed (Pteromura); those of limbs from short (Brachytarsomys) to long (Megaptera, Macropus).

The examples just mentioned and some of the designations of teeth and skulls require no special explanation and should perhaps not be classed with names of obscure application. On the other hand, many of the terms derived from special characters, both external and internal, are exceedingly obscure. Among others may be mentioned Heterodon (different tooth), in allusion to the inequality in size and form of the teeth; Megantereon (great chin), which refers to the size of the lower jaw and not to that of the animal;^a Ommatophoca (eyed seal), which refers to the immense orbits; Ommatostergus (a worker bereft of eyes), which antithetically refers to the apparent absence of eyes; Synotus, based on the union of the inner margins of the ears on the forehead; and Tomopeas (stump awl), so called from the short, blunt tragus. Names based on cranial or skeletal characters, and many of those based on teeth, are of uncertain application unless explained. Such are Cuperea (capero, to wrinkle), from the rugulose character of the ear bones; and Meganeuron (large nerve), from the large size of the neural passage in the atlas. Deltatherium, Lambdatherium, and Sigmodon are suggested by the enamel patterns of the molar teeth, which resemble the Greek letters Δ, Λ, Σ, respectively; Sycium refers to the bony walls of the pulp cavity, which close the lateral grooves but do not close the pulp cavity below; Nesodon (island tooth) takes its name from an island of enamel on the inner side of a molar; Ochetodon and Reithrodon (grooved tooth) refer to grooves on the upper incisors; Plagiaulax (oblique groove) refers to grooves on the lower premolars; while Plagiodontia (oblique tooth) refers to grooves on the molars.

Perhaps the most puzzling names are those of an indefinite character. Such are Proteles (complete in front), in reference to the full number of five toes on the fore feet in contrast to four on the hind feet, and names suggesting characters which are rudimentary or absent, as Ateles (incomplete) and Colobus (maimed), both referring to the rudimentary character of the thumb; Perodicticus, referring to the rudimentary index finger; Cholæpus (lame footed), indicating a reduced number of toes, and Olbodotes (giver of bliss) on account of the light which it throws on the development of the large incisors in the primitive rodents.

(9) Fanciful names.—Names of fanciful or poetic signification comprise mythological designations and a few other names. In many instances their application is exceedingly obscure, and although usually it is not difficult to ascertain the personage from whom the name is derived, the explanation of its application, unless given by the original describer, may easily be erroneous. Mythological names are objectionable, not only because they have been used so frequently in other classes that they are likely to be preoccupied, but also because of this ambiguity in application. The explanations given in the list will be found unsatisfactory in many cases, but the difficulty in working them out may be illustrated by a few examples. The genus of monkeys called Diana is apparently so named from the white marking or line over the forehead of the type species, which bears a fancied resemblance to the silver bow of the goddess Diana. Idomineus, the name of a king of Crete, does not seem applicable to a genus of gerbilles, unless it is remembered that Idomineus and Meriones were companions in arms in the Trojan war, and Meriones having long been used for a genus of Gerbillinæ, it was thought fitting that a subgenus of the same group should be named after his companion, Idomineus. Adjidaumo, as applied to an extinct genus of rodents from the western United States, requires for many the describer's explanation that the designation was the Indian name of a squirrel borrowed from Longfellow's poem 'Hiawatha.'

(10) Names founded on error.—Names founded on error or without application are comparatively few in number, but are still sufficiently numerous to warrant mention. Errors as to the relationships of animals are to be expected in the case of extinct forms described from fragmentary remains, and it is not surprising that additional specimens have sometimes shown that an animal belongs to a different family or order from the one to which it was originally referred. Such errors can be corrected when discovered, but the names in which they are sometimes embodied must stand as first published. Several generic names thus erroneously given are strikingly inapplicable. Thus Aceratherium was so named because it was supposed to be a hornless rhinoceros, but according to Osborn the animal probably did possess a rudimentary horn. Ailuravus, originally supposed to be an ancestral carnivore, is now regarded as a squirrel. Aodon (the toothless whale of Havre) really belongs to the toothed whales, but was described from an old specimen of Mesoplodon bidens which had evidently lost its teeth. The well-known genus of zeuglodon, originally described as Basilosaurus (king of the saurians) from its supposed reptilian characters, is now known to be a cetacean and not a reptile. Condylura (knotted tail) was applied to the star-nosed moles by Illiger, who based his description on a very imperfect figure, in which the tail was represented as having a series of nodes. Hyperoodon and Uranodon (palate tooth) were applied to the same genus of ziphioid whales on account of the rough papillæ on the palate, which were at first mistaken for teeth. Paradoxurus (strange tail) owes its name to the circumstance that the tail, which the animal has power to coil to some extent, was originally supposed to be prehensile, a character which would certainly be anomalous in the civet cats. Protorhea, based on an imperfect femur, was at first supposed to be an extinct struthious bird, but was afterwards regarded as a mammal related to the llamas. Stemmatopus (wreathed foot) was given to the hooded seal by Cuvier, though it is probable that the name intended was Stemmatops (wreathed face), in allusion to the hood, and that the insertion of a u by mistake transferred the allusion to the other extremity of the animal and destroyed the application of the name.

Finally may be mentioned nonsense names, which comprise coined names and anagrams (see pp. 46-47), mere arbitrary combinations of letters which have no meaning and no application. Explanations, however, are necessary to call attention to the fact that the names have been coined, or, in the case of anagrams, to show from what names they have been formed.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.

One of the pleasantest features connected with the preparation of this index, and one which has done much to relieve the monotonous labor of compilation and checking references, has been the hearty and generous spirit of cooperation manifested by those to whom application for assistance has been made. Without such cooperation the work would have been far from complete; many names here included would have escaped notice; many that have been verified would have lacked that element of certainty, and material and information of various kinds that contribute to the value of the book would have been wanting. I take pleasure in acknowledging my indebtedness for such aid to the many individuals who have placed their time, services, and information at my disposal.

To Dr. C. Hart Merriam, who originally projected the index, I am under especial obligations, not only for allowing me to work it out in my own way and to carry it far beyond the original limits, but also for furnishing every aid in the way of clerical help and particularly for personal suggestion and supervision.

My thanks, as well as of all those who use the index, are due to Mr. F. H. Waterhouse, librarian of the Zoological Society of London, who was engaged on a similar work, and on learning of the present index promptly and very generously placed his manuscript at my disposal. His list not only added a number of names and earlier references, but it furnished an invaluable check on the accuracy of the whole work. Since the 3,000 or more names which we had in common have been thus verified by two independent workers, much more confidence can be placed in the references. Acknowledgment is due to Dr. P. L. Selater, formerly secretary of the Zoological Society of London, who has shown great interest in the work and generously offered to have references to books inaccessible in this country verified in the library of the Zoological Society. To Dr. Theodore Gill I am under great obligations for several names new to the list, for frequent advice concerning questions of nomenclature, references to obscure or rare books, information respecting family names, and especially for constant assistance in determining the etymologies of names and in correcting the proof.

The completeness of the index has been greatly enhanced by working naturalists, who have sent separates of their papers containing new names, have revised lists of their genera submitted to them for that purpose, or furnished information which has made it possible to include full lists of the names published by them. In some cases, notably that of Dr. Florentino Ameghino, director of the Museo Nacional, Buenos Aires (who has named over four hundred genera of extinct mammals), the revision of such lists involved considerable labor. Among others who have furnished lists of their genera are Dr. J. A. Allen, curator of mammals in the American Museum of Natural History, New York; Dr. Ch. Depéret, of Lyons, France; Mr. C. W. De Vis, curator of the Queensland Museum, Brisbane; Prof. Dr. Alfred Nehring, of Berlin; Prof. Henry F. Osborn, of Columbia University, New York; Prof. William B. Scott, of Princeton University; Mr. Oldfield Thomas, curator of mammals in the Natural History Museum, London; Dr. E. L. Trouessart, of Paris, and Dr. F. W. True, of the U. S. National Museum.

For important aid in looking up or verifying references to books inaccessible in Washington, acknowledgments are due Mr. C. Davies Sherborn and Mr. Oldfield Thomas, of the British Museum; Dr. J. A. Allen, of the American Museum; Mr. S. N. Rhoads, and Mr. Witmer Stone, of Philadelphia.

I am also under obligations to several persons for special assistance rendered in various ways. To Mr. W. E. De Winton, of the British Museum, for dates and etymology of Aethurus; to Dr. Paul Matschie, of the Berlin Museum, for publications; to Dr. Santiago Roth, of La Plata, Argentina, for copies of papers and for information concerning several generic names; to Mr. W. L. Sclater, Director of the South African Museum, for information respecting several South African rodents; to Mr. F. A. Lucas, of the U. S. National Museum, and Dr. E. L. Trouessart, of Paris, for references and assistance in other ways; to Dr. William H. Dall and Dr. Leonhard Stejneger, for advice regarding questions of nomenclature; to Prof. O. P. Hay, of the American Museum of Natural History, for references, numerous suggestions during the progress of the work, and for the opportunity of examining the proof of his 'Catalogue of Extinct Vertebrates of North America;' to Dr. W. D. Matthew, of the American Museum, New York, for notes on several doubtful groups of extinct mammals; to Mr. Gerrit S. Miller, jr., for several names, for verifying references, and for information regarding the genera of Vespertilionidæ and Microtinæ; to Dr. Charles W. Richmond, for references and data concerning dates of publication of names; and to Miss Mary J. Rathbun, for the privilege of consulting her manuscript catalogue of genera of Crustacea in the search for names which might preoccupy names of mammals, and also for calling my attention to the generic names contained in Brewster's Encyclopedia.

In the preparation of the manuscript for the press Miss Louise de Bonneville has rendered much assistance in checking derivations and looking up the application of names.

Finally, special mention should be made of the careful and painstaking work of Miss Thora Steineger, who under my direction has looked up many of the references, indexed most of the families, added many names, and typewritten practically the whole list with great care. During three trips abroad she verified numerous references in the libraries in Bergen, Berlin, London, and Paris, and her visit to the library of the Zoological Society of London brought the index to the notice of Mr. Waterhouse and eventually resulted in the acquisition of his manuscript.

Type: Antilope cervicapra (Linnæus), from India.

In an article on the 'Springbock' of the Cape region (now known as Antidorcas euchore) Sparrman says that Pallas calls this animal Antilope pygargus. Sparrman also mentions Capra cervicapra of Linnæus, based on figures by Houttein and Dodart, but states that the latter figure does not fit the Springbock. He adds: "The name Cervicapra might be applied to the entire group of Gazelles, to indicate a form intermediate between the deer and goats." This name was called to the attention of Mr. Oldfield Thomas, of the British Museum, who, after consulting Mr. Bather, replied: "We agree that the name should be considered as validly founded, but that (on the name rule) the type of it would be Antilope cervicapra Linn. . . ."

Result—Antilope Pall., 1766; syn. Cervicapra Sparrm., 1780.

Redunca H. Smith, 1827; syn. Cervicapra Blainv., 1816, nec Sparrm., 1780." (THOMAS, in epist., Nov. 26, 1901.)

Type: Les 'fourmiliers épineux' (= Myrmecophaga aculeata Shaw), from New South Wales, Australia.

Name preoccupied by Echidna Forster, 1788, a genus of Pisces. Thomas (Cat. Marsup. & Monotrem. Brit. Mus., 377, 1888) has claimed that the name was not preoccupied, as no species was mentioned as the type of Forster's genus, and the description is unrecognizable, it being thus virtually a nomen nudum. Later he admitted that the name was preoccupied and adopted Tachyglossus. (See Ann. Mus. Civ. Storia Nat. Genova, ser. 2^a, XVIII, 621, 1897.)

Echidna: ἔχιδνα, adder, viper—probably from the sharp spines, which are supposed to prick like the fangs of a viper.

Trouessart gives "Echinodes Pomel, 1848 (sine caract.)" in the synonymy of Hemicentetes; but Pomel only uses the name in a tribal or supergeneric sense in the form Echinoidea in the paper quoted (Biblioth. Univ. de Genève, Archiv. Sci. Phys. et Nat., IX, 251, Nov., 1848). Coues considers it the "same as Hemicentetes."

 Name preoccupied by Echinothrix Brookes, 1828, a genus of Erethizontidæ; and by Echinothrix Peters, 1853, a genus of Echinodermata. Replaced by Craurothrix Thomas, 1896. The latter name was afterwards discarded by Thomas with the following explanation: "As I have now joined those who think that names should be retained as originally spelt, whether classically right or wrong (except in the case of obvious misprints), I am now prepared to consider that Peters's Echinothrix of 1853 does not preoccupy Gray's Echiothrix of 1867, and therefore again recognize the latter term . . . That the missing out of the letter n is not a misprint is shown by Gray having written on the type skin what appears to be 'Echithrix,' might be 'Echiothrix,' but is certainly not 'Echinothrix.'" (Trans. Zool. Soc. London, XIV, pt. VI, 397 footnote June, 1898.)

The latter author is ordinarily quoted as the original founder of the name, and his list includes the best-known species—G. dorcas. But Lichtenstein's genus, two years earlier in date, does not contain G. dorcas at all, and the only way

Gundi ('FISCHER') LATASTE, 1881.

Glires, Octodontidæ.

LATASTE, Bull. Soc. Zool. de France, VI, 223, 1881.

Gundi is erroneously given as a generic name by Lataste, who refers it to Fischer.

Following is a full statement of the question: "En 1829 Fischer (Syn. Mamm., p. 346) mentionne l'Arctomys gundi avec une diagnose et une indication d'habitat qu'il emprunte aux auteurs dont il cite les noms: Rothman, Pallas, Pennant, Shaw. Dans cet article, ce dernier nom termine les indications synonymiques, et il est suivi de ces mots: 'Gundi arabicus' (le Gundi des arabes). C'est vraisemblablement ce passage qui, mal lu, a fait attribuer à Shaw un genre et une espèce qu'il n'a pas créés, et que personne n'a créés, que je sache." (LATASTE.) Shaw merely says (Gen. Zool., II, pt. 1, 123, 1801): "It is called by the Arabs Gundi." This statement is translated by Fischer "Gundi Arabibus" (nec arabicus!), and is evidently intended to show that Gundi is a common and not a generic name. The animal was named Otenodactylus by Gray in 1830.

Type: Bathmodon semicinctus Cope, from the Eocene (Wasatch beds), near Evans-ton, Utah.

"I first applied the name Loxolophodon, with a diagnostic description, to this genus [of Uintatheriidæ] in a short paper published August 19, 1872 . . . I again described it more fully in a paper published August 22d . . . Prior to the issue of the paper of August 22, I had (February 16, 1872) provisionally applied the name Loxolophodon to the species there called Bathmodon semicinctus Cope, without generic character. With further material it appears that the Bathmodon semicinctus is very near to the B. radians, so that the name Loxolophodon was cancelled in this connection, and was used again for the present genus without interference, especially as it was first published as a nomen nudum."* (COPE, Tert. Vert., 572.)

*The name, however, can hardly be considered as a nomen nudum, as it was applied to B. semicinctus, which was fully described.—T. S. P.

Mimetes LEACH, 1820.

Primates, Simiidæ.

Thomson's Ann. Philos., XVI, No. xcii, 104, Aug., 1820; COUES, Century Dict., IV, 3768, 1890.

"In the Journal de Physique, Dr. Leach has pointed out the generic differences that exist between the Black and the Red Orang-otans. The first genus, Mimetes, Leach (Chimpanse), the nearest animal to man, has no intermaxillary bone; it has the last joint of the great toe perfect; and has the ligamentum suspensorium of the thigh bone. The type is Simia troglodytes" from West Africa (Ann. Philos. 104). This is an error, as the generic name given to the 'Chimpanzé' in the Journal de Physique (LXXXIX, 156, Aug., 1819) is Troglodytes, not Mimetes.

"This genus was proposed by W. E. Leach about 1816,* and antedates both Troglodytes of Geoffroy and Anthropopithecus of De Blainville." (COUES.)

The genus was based on a “flat bone, yellowish white, solid, hard and heavy, rounded, with a reniform base, eight inches broad and six and a half long; half an inch thick; . . . from the alluvial region of Louisiana.” It was supposed by Rafinesque to have been the head plate of a fish, but the name is included under the Cetacea by Agassiz and given as a synonym of Physeter macrocephalus by Leidy (Ext. * This name is erroneously referred by Agassiz (Nomenclator Zool., Mamm., 23, 1842), to De Blainville, Bull. Soc. Philomatique, 1826. The name proposed by De Blainville in this volume, p. 64, is however Ctenomys and not Orycteromys.

† "Établi en 1791, par Ét. Geoffroy Saint-Hilaire (Mag. Encycl., t. VI; et Bull. de la Soc. Phil. de Paris, t. I)." (D'Orbigny's Diet. Hist. Nat., IX, 228, 1849.) The date, however, does not agree with that for the mammal part of the Encycl. Méth. as given by Sherborn in P. Z. S. 1893, 582-584, and it is doubtful if there is any earlier description than those cited above.

Glires, Geomyidæ?

Mag. de Zoologie, VI, Mamm., 20–21, 23–24, pl. 21, 1836.

The genus is credited to Blainville and includes 5 groups or subgenera now placed in three distinct families: Diplostoma Rafinesque and Saccophorus Kuhl (Geomyidæ); Sacomys Cuvier (Heteromyidæ); Poepthagomys Cuvier and Ctenomys Blainville (Octodontidæ).

* The preface of this book is dated January 1, 1874. The work appeared in parts and the pages here quoted probably came out in 1873. Allen and Trouessart both quote the date 1873 for this work. Dr. Leonhard Stejneger is also of the opinion that the first volume appeared in 1873.

† Possibly a misprint for Orycteromys 'Blainville, 1826.'

Oryctomys—Continued.

Under Saccophorus 3 species are given: Mus bursarius Shaw, from the upper Mississippi Valley; Ascomys mexicanus Lichtenstein, from eastern Mexico; and Oryctomys (Saccophorus) bottæ Blainville MSS., from California.

Apparently a new name for the Narwhal (Monodon Linnaeus, 1758, and Ceratodon Brisson, 1762). Type: Monodon monoceros Linnaeus, from the Arctic Ocean.

Oryx was also used by Blainville in the same year (May, 1816) for a genus of African antelopes. "As Blainville's name has long been in current use and was published very early in the year 1816, there is no reason to question its tenability. It probably has a slight priority over Oryx Oken." (ALLEN, l. c., 375.)

Otelaphus: οὖς, ὠτός, ear; ἔλαφος, deer—in allusion to the large ears.

* Gray in 1864 mentions Viverra fusca under Urva cancrivora (= Gulo urva). Thomas gives the latter as the type, but apparently does not consider it the same species.

† The prefix Ot-, from οὖς ὠτός, ear, is used (except in a few cases like Otocolobus) to denote possession of large ears. The size of the ear, however, is merely relative. It may be apparently small as in Otaria, although actually large in comparison with that of the ‘earless’ seals.

- Zebu ? 1845. Ungulata, Artiodactyla, Bovidae.
 London Encyclopædia, XXII, 752, 1845 (art. Zoology).
Zebus BLYTH, Journ. Asiatic Soc., Bengal, XXIX, No. III, 283, 1860; Cat. Mamm. Mus. Asiatic Soc., 159, 1863.
 The genus was first described in an unsigned article in the London Encyclopædia and was evidently based on Bos indicus, although no species was mentioned. Blyth's genus was based on "the Zebu or humped cattle of the hotter regions of Asia and Africa."
Zebu: French zébu, a name adopted by Buffon and supposed by him to be from an African word. If not invented, it is probably intended to represent the East Indian zobo, the name of a breed of cattle supposed to be a hybrid between the zebu and yak. (Century Dict.)
 The origin of the name zebu is quite unknown, it being foreign to all the native languages of India. (LYDEKKER, Wild Oxen, Sheep, and Goats of All Lands, 20, 1898.)
- Zebua ('ERXLEBEN') GRAY, 1837. Marsupialia, Macropodidae.
 Charlesworth's Mag. Nat. Hist., I, 582, 1837.
 Possibly a misprint for Yerboa Zimmermann, 1777. Gray gives the name only in the form "Macropus major Shaw. Zebua gigantea Erxl." Erxleben used the name Jaculus gigantea, but Zimmermann in the same year (1777) used the term Yerboa gigantea for the same species.
- Zebus BLYTH, 1860. Ungulata, Artiodactyla, Bovidae.
 Journ. Asiatic Soc., Bengal, XXIX, No. III, 283, 1860; Cat. Mamm. Mus. Asiatic Soc., 159, 1863.
 Based on 'the zebu or humped cattle of the hotter regions of Asia and Africa.'
Zebus: zebu.

Zugodon SCUDDER, Nomenclator Zool., pt. I, 357, 1882.
New name for Basilosaurus Harlan, 1824, supposed by the describer to have been a genus of saurians. Owen having demonstrated the Mammalian nature of the teeth on which the genus was based, "in compliance with the suggestion of Dr. Harlan, . . . proposes to substitute for the name Basilosaurus that of Zeuglodon, suggested by the form of the posterior molars, which resemble two teeth tied or yoked together."

PART II.—FAMILY AND SUBFAMILY NAMES OF MAMMALS.

INTRODUCTION.

A family has been defined as “a group of animals intermediate between the genus and order based on structural features of a more general character than the genus, while the limits are determined by the range and extent of the differential characteristics which exist between the typical form and the next allied. A family may therefore be monotypic (i. e., limited to a single known species) or exceedingly polymorphic (i. e., embracing thousands of species).”^a

HISTORY.^b

In the system of classification adopted by Linnæus in 1758 only four categories of organisms were recognized—classes, orders, genera, and species. In 1780 the number was increased to 11 by Storr, and numerous additions have since been suggested to meet the requirements of modern systematists. In fact, as shown by Gill, no less than 31 categories have been proposed in the series beginning with the kingdom and ranging down to the individual.^c Of these 20 have been actually applied in the class Mammalia, and 18 in the class Pisces. Between order and genus the subdivisions, omitting the suborder, are 7 in number. Of these, however, none have come into general use except the family and subfamily.

The term family as a subdivision of an order was apparently first used by Latreille, in 1796, in his ‘Précis des Caractères génériques des Insectes.’ But the groups to which he gave the name were designated merely by numbers, and it was not until ten years later, in his ‘Genera Crustaceorum et Insectorum,’ published in 1806, that the families were systematically named. Meanwhile, in 1798, Cuvier, in his ‘Tableau Élémentaire de l’Histoire Naturelle des Animaux,’ had divided two orders (one unnamed, the other Neuroptères) into families and applied names to the groups, and Duméril, in 1806, in his 'Zoologie Analytique,' had recognized families in all the classes, and designated them mainly by descriptive names.

^a GILL, Johnson’s Universal Cyclopædia, new ed., III, p. 283, 1894.

^b The facts in the following brief résumé have been drawn chiefly from an address delivered by Dr. Theo. Gill before the Buffalo meeting of American Association for the Advancement of Science, Proc. A. A. S., XLV, p. 24 et seq., 1896.

^c Gill suggests that a happy mean may be obtained by adopting 13 divisions in the animal kingdom—branch and subbranch, and species and subspecies for the extremes—while the intermediate groups, order, family, and genus, are each accompanied by a super and a sub group.

Besides applying names to families in 1806, Latreille had divided these groups into minor subdivisions and applied the term tribe (tribu) to the chief subdivisions. In 1815 Rafinesque employed the term subfamily (sous-famille) with a descriptive name for groups of the same relative rank as Latreille's tribes. The value of these two groups caused their ready adoption by other zoologists, and they have come into general use.

To William Kirby, an English entomologist, is due the credit for the suggestion that family names should have a uniform ending—"idæ." In a paper published in 1815 entitled "Strepsiptera, a New Order of Insects Proposed," he says:

I think if each order were divided into denominate sections (by which I mean sections that have a name) it would be a great improvement, and very much facilitate the study of this science. M. Latreille has led the way here and done much for us, but as is often the case with new inventions, his system is not sufficiently simple for general use; his names, likewise, have not that harmony and uniformity of termination which is necessary to make them easily retained by the memory. If we adopted patronymic appellation for these sections, for instance, Coleoptera scarabæidæ, Coleoptera staphylinidæ, Coleoptera sphacridiadæ, Orthoptera gryllidæ, etc., it would be liable to no objection of this kind.^a

The advantages of uniformity in distinctive termination are so evident that Kirby's suggestion speedily found favor and was adopted for mammals by Gray in 1821 and by Bonaparte in 1831. It is now generally accepted; but for many years there was no distinct and uniform termination for each of these groups, different authors being governed by different rules. Agassiz made no distinction between families and subfamilies, but applied the ending oidæ to names of Greek origin, and inæ to those of Latin origin. Burmeister used idæ, but called the groups thus distinguished subfamilies. Lesson in 1842 adopted the termination idææ; other zoologists used the endings idi or ida, and still others ini or ina. At present, however, uniform terminations effectually distinguish the family and subfamily from other groups and also from each other. The ending idæ suggested by Kirby has been preserved for the family and the corresponding ending inæ is applied to the subfamily.^b

Much less attention has been paid by systematists to higher groups than to genera and species. Family names were included in Agassiz's ^aTrans. Linn. Soc. London, XI, p. 88, 1815.

^bBlanchard, following Pfeffer, has called attention to the grammatical objections to adding the ending idæ to Greek words without distinction (Jahrb. Hamburg. Wiss. Anstalten, VII, No. 6, 1890). Properly, words of the first and second declensions ending in ος, α, and η should have the termination ιδæ (short i); those of the third declension ending in εως, ιδæ (long i); those of the first and second declensions ending in ιος, ια, ης, and ας, and those of the third declension in ις and ιας take iadæ; while those of the third declension in ως and ω take oidæ. All other words of the 'Nomenclator Zoologicus,' published in 1842-46, but since then apparently no attempt has been made to index the family and subfamily names of mammals.

STABILITY.

A family name differs radically from that of a species, genus or order, in being based on the name of one of its subordinate groups, its validity depending on whether its type genus is recognized or not. It carries its type, so to speak, within itself, and therefore can not be a nomen nudum in the sense in which a generic name may be, except when the genus on which it is based is a nomen nudum. Moreover, family names are rarely preoccupied, since there can not be two valid generic names having the same form in use at the same time. Occasionally it happens that a subfamily name of mammals may be preoccupied by a similar name in another group, for example, Ellobiinae Gill, 1872, a subfamily of murine rodents, is preoccupied by Ellobiinae Adams, 1858, a subfamily of mollusks; the former is based on Ellobius, the latter on Ellobium, but the form of the subfamily name is identical in both cases. There is also the case of Gliridae Thomas, 1896, a family of dormice, preoccupied by Gliridae Ogilby, 1837. However, in the latter case the earlier name is a descriptive term, and was not based on a generic name belonging to the same group.

RELATIVE RANK.

The relative values assigned to families and subfamilies by different authors have been almost as varied as the terminations employed. In some cases, names ending in 'ina' have been employed for groups higher than modern families—almost subordinal in rank. In other cases, they have been employed for tribes or groups subordinate to the subfamily. Owing to the resulting difficulty in indicating the relative rank the expedient has here been adopted of including all names between the genus and the order that end in 'idi,' 'idæ,' 'ida,' as well as those that end in 'ini,' 'inæ,' and 'ina.' The former are treated as families and the latter as subfamilies, irrespective of whether the id names are termed subfamilies or the in names tribes or families. As in the Index of Genera no distinction is made between genera and subgenera, so here families and subfamilies are treated alike, except when a group has been proposed as a subfamily (with ending 'ini,' 'inæ,' or 'ina') and later on raised to family third declension take idæ and iadæ. Blanchard has also called attention to the fact that family names in idæ and iadæ are masculine, while those of subfamilies in inæ are feminine (Deux. Rapport Nomenclature Êtres Organisés, présenté au Congrès Int. Zool. Moscou, pp. 30, 57, 1893). To overcome these difficulties, he proposed at the meeting of the International Zoological Congress, held in Moscow in 1892, six modifications to the rule for the formation of family names, but these modifications were not adopted.

rank. In such cases the reference for the first publication of the form 'idæ' is also included.

RULES CONCERNING FAMILY NAMES.

In the use of designations of higher groups much more latitude is allowed than in the case of either genera or species. In fact on many points modern codes of nomenclature are silent or very indefinite. This will be apparent on comparing the provisions quoted below from the four principal zoological codes, namely, the Stricklandian Code of 1837-42, the code of the American Ornithologists' Union, 1886; the rules of nomenclature adopted by the International Congress of Zoology (the Paris-Moscow Code, 1889-92), and the report of the International Commission for Zoological Nomenclature, submitted to the Fourth International Congress, 1898.

Stricklandian Code, 1837.^a—Rule 16. The names of tribes, families, and subfamilies should each have a distinctive termination. (Swainson.)

18. The names of families and subfamilies should be derived from the most typical genus in them. (Swainson.)

These rules were modified in 1842^b as follows:

B. It is recommended that the assemblages of genera termed families should be uniformly named by adding the termination 'idæ' to the name of the earliest-known or most typically characterized genus in them, and that their subdivisions, termed subfamilies, should be similarly constructed, with the termination 'inæ.'

These words are formed by changing the last syllable of the genitive case into 'idæ' or 'inæ,' as strix, strigis, strigidæ; buceros, bucerotis, bucerotidæ; not strixidæ, buceridæ.

A. O. U. Code, 1886.—Canon 5. Proper names of families and subfamilies take the tenable name of some genus, preferably the leading one, which these groups, respectively, contain, with change of termination into 'idæ' or 'inæ.' When the generic name becomes a synonym, a current family or subfamily name based upon such generic name becomes untenable.

Canon 16. The law of priority is only comparatively operative in relation to names of groups higher than genera, and only where names are strictly synonymous.^c

^a Charlesworth's Mag. Nat. Hist., I, p. 175, 1837.

^b Rept. Brit. Ass. Adv. Sci., p. 119, 1843.

^c "A time will doubtless arrive when mutations in the names of the higher groups, particularly families, will be as unnecessary as they are undesirable; but in zoology that time has not yet come.

"It should be clearly borne in mind that such changes are only allowable when by mutation of the characters, or through newly discovered facts, the name in question has become glaringly erroneous or liable to introduce errors or confusion into science. In family names, this occurs most often when a genus from whose name that of the family must have been taken is removed from association with the Paris-Moscow Code, 1889-92.—Art. 42. Les noms de famille sont formés en ajoutant la désinence idæ au radical du genre servant de type. On dénommera les subdivisions de la famille en ajoutant la désinence inæ au nom du genre servant de type.

Art. 43. Un nom de famille doit disparaître et être remplacé, si le nom générique, aux dépens duquel il était formé, tombe en synonymie et disparaît lui-même de la nomenclature.

Art. 46. La loi de priorité est applicable aux noms de familles ou de groupes plus élevés, tout aussi bien qu'aux noms de genres et d'espèces, à la condition qu'il s'agisse de groupes ayant même extension.

Report of the Fourth International Congress, 1898.—Section 31.

The name of a family is formed by adding the ending idæ, the name of a subfamily by adding inæ to the root of the name of its type genus.

Section 32. The name of a family or subfamily should be changed when the generic name serving as type is changed.

APPLICATION OF RULES.

In one respect the various codes are in complete agreement, viz, in declaring that families should be based on valid genera, and should have the termination 'idæ,' while subfamilies should end in 'inæ.' But as to the names to which these terminations are to be applied there is room for considerable diversity of opinion. The Stricklandian Code declares that the family should be based on "the earliest known or most typically characterized genus;" the A. O. U. Code on the "tenable name of some genus, preferably the leading one;" the International Code, "au radical du genre servant de type." Again the A. O. U. Code declares that the law of priority applies only where names are strictly synonymous and is at best only partially operative, while the International Code states that the law is applicable to the names of groups of the same extent, but implies that it is not mandatory as in the case of genera and species.

A few examples will show the difficulty of applying these rules. The chinchillas form a homogeneous group of three genera, the viscachas, Viscaccia, 1816 or Lagostomus, 1828; the true chinchillas with five toes on the front feet, Chinchilla, 1829, or Eriomys, 1829; and the four-toed chinchillas, Lagidium, 1833. The first is restricted to the pampas of Argentina and the last two are confined to the Andes of Peru and Chile. Thus there are five names—Viscaccia, Lagostomus, Chinchilla, Eriomys, and Lagidium—for three genera, and four of these five generic names have been used as the basis of the four corresponding family names, Viscachideæ 1842, Chinchillidæ 1833, Eriomyidæ 1854, and majority of the genera which that family has included, and that genus is inserted in another family. Also, when a large number of genera are redistributed into families, widely differing in their limits from those in which they had previously been known. In either of these cases, liability to error may be so great as to render a new name desirable." (Dall, Rept. Am. Ass. Adv. Sci., 1877, p. 27.)

Lagostomidæ 1838. Moreover, Chinchillidæ, Eriomyidæ, and Lagostomidæ are in more or less common use and all apply to the same group. It is now known that Viscaccia antedates Lagostomus by twelve years; and it can be shown that Eriomys and Chinchilla were published in the same year, but that the latter was more fully described and hence is better entitled to recognition; Lagostomus and Eriomys being thus reduced to synonymy, Lagostomidæ and Eriomyidæ need not be considered. Of the other two, Chinchillidæ 1833 was actually the earliest family name, whereas Viscachidæ 1842 was based on the earliest genus. The A. O. U. Code furnishes little help in the solution of this question, since it is difficult to say whether Chinchilla or Viscaccia is the leading genus. Under the Stricklandian Code it is equally difficult to determine which is the most typically characterized genus, but there is no doubt that Viscaccia was the earliest known; hence, under the second requirement of that code, the family name would become Viscacciidæ—a term scarcely ever used.

The American kangaroo rats and pocket mice, comprising the five genera Dipodomys, Perodipus, Microdipodops, Perognathus, and Heteromys, have long been known under the family name of Saccomyidæ, but Sacomys has been dropped as unidentifiable and recently Heteromyidæ has been adopted for the family. At least three of the genera, including Heteromys, had been previously selected as types of higher groups: In 1853 Gervais named the family Dipodomyna; in 1868 Gray recognized two tribes, Dipodomyina and Heteromyina, and in 1875 Coues separated the subfamily, Perognathidinæ. Under the A. O. U. Code, any one of the three genera Heteromys, Dipodomys, and Perognathus would have claims to recognition as the leading genus, though Dipodomys is usually considered the most typical; and by selecting the family names according to priority of publication and without reference to the date of the genus, Dipodomyidæ would be the proper name. But Allen, in adopting Heteromyidæ, followed the Stricklandian Code literally, basing the family name on the first-described genus, although this action transferred the type of the family to one of the most aberrant members of the group.

These examples illustrate the two main difficulties in existing rules for family names: (1) Confusion due to the use of several names all of which may be applicable to the same group; (2) change in type, which sometimes occurs when the family name is uniformly based on the first-described genus. Were mammalogists to adopt the earliest genus as a basis for the family name such a rule would necessitate a number of changes; thus, in the Glires, Caviidæ (Cavia, 1766) would become Hydrochæridæ (Hydrochærus, 1762); Dasyproctidæ (Dasyprocta, 1811) would become Agoutidæ (Agouti, 1799); Erethizonidæ (Erethizon, 1822) would become Coendidæ (Coendou, 1799), and Octodontidæ (Octodon, 1832), would become Myocastoridæ (Myocastor, 1792).

INDEX OF FAMILIES AND SUBFAMILIES.

NOTE.—An asterisk (*) indicates that the group is extinct. A double dagger (‡) indicates that the name is not available on account of being a descriptive term not based on a genus, or because the generic name from which it is formed is preoccupied.

No attempt is made to mark names which are unavailable because the genera on which they are based have lapsed into synonymy.

Small black-face type is used for names originally proposed as subfamilies and afterwards raised to family rank.

Italic type is used for variants of both family and subfamily names.

PART III.—INDEX OF GENERA ARRANGED ACCORDING TO ORDERS AND FAMILIES.

INTRODUCTION.

The alphabetical indexes of genera and families in Parts I and II will facilitate reference to a given name and aid in ascertaining its place of publication, its type, or its etymology; but if it is necessary to know what names have been used in a certain group, why a name is unavailable, or whether any published name is available for one which is preoccupied, such information can be obtained from them, if at all, only after much labor, or by first consulting elsewhere a full list of synonyms of the group.

These difficulties became apparent early in the progress of the work, and in order to obviate them experiments were made in tabulating the names under each of the higher groups. The most satisfactory arrangement was published in December, 1897, in a paper entitled 'A List of the Generic and Family Names of Rodents.'^a In this list the names were arranged alphabetically under families, and the recent and extinct groups distinguished by the use of black-face type for the former and italics for the latter, as in the following pages. Everything was subordinated to convenience of reference; genera and subgenera were treated alike, references omitted, and the accompanying data reduced to the three most important items of author, date, and type or included species, so that the entries under each name would be as brief as possible and in ordinary cases restricted to a single line.

This arrangement seemed to serve the purpose so well that it has been adopted in the present work with three important modifications—addition of the type localities (which, however, are usually reduced to two or three words), incorporation of cross references to direct attention to synonyms or new names for those preoccupied, and omission of variants except those which differ in the initial letter or are otherwise of special importance.

ARRANGEMENT.

As in the other parts of the work, orders, families, and genera are alphabetically arranged. But this has made it difficult in some respects to adopt a system of classification which would reflect modern views and at the same time meet the needs of the index. If too conservative an arrangement of the higher groups were adopted the families would often be so broad that the lists would be long and unwieldy, and include names of genera which are now recognized as belonging to distinct groups. If, on the other hand, too much subdivision were attempted the names of related genera would be scattered under several families which, on account of the alphabetical arrangement, would not be in close proximity. The following arrangement is therefore more or less of a compromise, and is not to be regarded in any sense as an ideal system of classification, but merely as a system adopted especially to meet the needs of the present work and to facilitate comparison of the generic names. It can hardly be expected that this arrangement will meet with general acceptance, especially in the case of some of the extinct groups; but when genera are subject to such frequent and violent changes as are common in paleontology—when, for example, a group is shifted from the Primates to the Glires, as in the case of Mirodectes^a—it is almost impossible to find a scheme of classification which will be stable for any length of time.

The treatment of families is conservative, but at the same time most of the groups which are currently recognized—nearly two hundred in number—have been admitted.

The classification adopted follows, in the main, that of Flower and Lydekker's 'Mammals, Living and Extinct' (1891), but with modifications in many cases. Thus the Edentata have been divided into two orders, the Edentata and Effodientia; the Creodonta and Tillodontia are recognized as full orders, and the Astrapotheroidea and Typotheria given subordinal rank under the Ungulata.^b In extinct groups, Hay's 'Bibliography and Catalogue of Fossil Vertebrata of North America' (1902), Trouessart's 'Catalogus Mammalium' (1897-99), and Zittel's 'Handbuch der Paläontologie' (1892-93) have been the guides. In the Cete, Beddard, Gray, and True have been consulted, and in the Chiroptera and Insectivora, Dobson's classification has been followed in the main. The arrangement of the extinct Edentates is largely that of Zittel, with modifications from recent papers of Ameghino. The classification of the Glires is that outlined by Thomas ^aSee OSBORN, Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., XVI, 203, 206, 1902.

^bAccording to some authors the groups of Ungulata usually treated as suborders are entitled to ordinal rank. Thus SCOTT ('Introduction to Geology,' p. 548, 1897) does not recognize the Ungulata, but gives the Amblypoda, Artiodactyla, Condylarthra, Litopterna, Perissodactyla, Proboscidea, Toxodontia, and Typotheria as full orders. It is more convenient, however, for present purposes to consider these groups as divisions of the Ungulata and keep them together, instead of having them scattered, as would be the case under the alphabetical arrangement.

(Proc. Zool. Soc. London, 1897), and the arrangement of the Marsupialia is that of the same author, as given in the 'Catalogue of Marsupialia of the British Museum' (1888), with a few necessary modifications. In the extinct families Abderitidæ, Epanorthidæ, and Garzonidæ, the recent arrangement of Ameghino has been followed (Anal. Mus. Nac. Buenos Aires, IX, p. 159, 1903). In the case of the Ungulata the following arrangements have been adopted: That of Sclater and Thomas for the Antelopes, that of Lydekker for the other Bovidæ and the Cervidæ, and those of Osborn, Matthew, and Earle for some of the extinct groups of North America.

Under this treatment it will be interesting to note the number of families which are monotypic—that is, comprise only a single valid genus. Seventeen such families are recognized by Trouessart,^a while 18 are here recognized, as shown in the following list:

Allotheria:	Marsupialia:
Tritylodontidæ.	Notoryctidæ.
Edentata:	Paurodontidæ.

NOMENCLATURE.

In the designations of the higher groups discrepancies will often be noticed upon comparison with the nomenclature used in other works of reference. The name of the class Mammalia is one of the few names concerning which there is universal agreement. For subclasses two sets of terms are in common use—Ornithodelphia, Didelphia, and Monodelphia of De Blainville, and Prototheria, Metatheria, and Eutheria of later authors, which are given preference in some recent works.^b These terms, however, are not properly synonymous

^a TROUESSART gives the Trichechidæ, Procaviidæ, Pyrotheridæ, Pantolambdidæ, and Polymastodontidæ in addition to the groups above mentioned, but unites some of the remaining families with other groups, or places additional genera under them, so that they are not monotypic.

^b "The Eutheria may embrace the Metetheria or Marsupials, the Mesetheria or primitive Mesozoic Placentals, the Ceneutheria or Tertiary Placentals." (OSBORN, Am. Journ. Sci., 4th ser., VII, p. 93 footnote, Feb., 1899.) The last two groups were previously called Mesoplacentalia and Cenoplacentalia (OSBORN, Trans. N. Y. Acad. Sci., XIII, pp. 234-237, June 4, 1894).

with those of De Blainville. As originally proposed by Doctor Gill,^a the Prototheria included the monotremes or Ornithodelphia, and the Eutheria the marsupials and placentals or both the Didelphia and Monodelphia. Gill thus used Prototheria and Eutheria as subclasses, and Ornithodelphia, Didelphia, and Monodelphia as superorders, an arrangement which has been recently followed by Hay. While these names do not appear in the following index, they are here given with full references because they are seldom indexed and it is difficult to find where they were first proposed. The references are as follows:

Similarly, although no attempt has been made to index ordinal or subordinal names, which are also outside the scope of this work, references for such as are accorded recognition will be found under the names themselves. The ordinal names Allotheria, Cete, Feræ, and Glires have been adopted on grounds of priority instead of the better known terms Multituberculata, Cetacea, Carnivora, and Rodentia. The name Bruta of Linnæus also has strong claims for adoption in place of the much later Edentata, and it has been recently adopted by Hay.^d Edentata is here used, not because it is better entitled to recognition, but chiefly because under the alphabetical arrangement the related families of Edentata and Effodientia are thus brought together instead of being widely separated, as would be the case if the former groups were entered under Bruta.

In family names the designation in common use has been followed unless some good reason has appeared for selecting another name, as when the generic name on which the family name is based is antedated or preoccupied by some other name. When a choice has been possible the earliest published family name has been used in preference to the name based on the first described genus, unless the latter happens to be in common use (for example, Erethizontidæ instead of Coendidæ), but in such cases attention is called to the fact. Under the arrange-

COMPARISONS.

To show more clearly how this classification differs from that of other recent works, comparisons may be made with the classifications given in Flower and Lydekker's 'Mammals Living and Extinct,' pp. 88-92, 1891; Trouessart's 'Catalogus Mammalium,' I, pp. v-vi; II, pp. iii-v, 1897-99, and Beddard's 'Mammalia,' pp. ix-xii, 1902. Briefly stated, a number of family names will be found in this list which do not occur in the works just mentioned, while 10 of those given by Flower and Lydekker, 7 of those given by Trouessart, and 7 of those given by Beddard are not here recognized. In all cases, however, the genera belonging to the groups in question will be found under other families. It is interesting to note that of these 24 family names, which form 12 per cent of the total number recognized, only one is common to two of the works of reference just cited. The families not accorded recognition are as follows:

Table showing some of the Families not recognized in this Index.

Comparison of the list of groups under Gliræ with Thomas' 'Genera of Rodents' will show that all of his groups have been given recognition, with the addition of the Zapodidæ and the following six extinct families: Castoroididæ, Eocardidæ, Ischyromyidæ, Mixodectidæ, Pseudosciuridæ, and Theridomyidæ. The Lophyominae have been accorded full family rank, the name Muscardinidæ has been substituted for Gliridæ, and in the Muridæ, Cricetinae has been substituted for Sigmodontinae and Myotalpinæ for Siphneinae.

CROSS REFERENCES.

These various changes are indicated by cross references. Old family names which are not recognized are entered in their proper places, with a reference in each case to the name adopted, so that no confusion need be caused by looking for a generic name under either the old or new family designation. If, however, this method entails any difficulty, recourse may be had to the special index at the end of Part III.

An examination of the list of generic names will show that in many cases the same species has been made the basis of several genera. This may be due to the first name being preoccupied or to the fact that one or more of them have been published in obscure places and consequently overlooked by subsequent workers. Thus Babirussa babirussa, Giraffa giraffa, Hippopotamus liberiensis, and Microtus pinetorum have each formed the basis of 4 generic names; Dicrostonyx torquatus, Fiber zibethicus, and Tayassu torquatus of 5; and Galeopithecus volans, Hydrodamalis gigas, and Simia satyrus of 6. Three striking examples are those of the aye-aye (Daubentonia madagascariensis) and the two-toed anteater (Cyclopes didactylus), each of which has received seven names; and the chimpanzee (Simia troglodytes), which has received no less than nine:

AYE-AYE.	TWO-TOED ANTEATER.	CHIMPANZEE.
Daubentonia Geoffroy, 1795.	Cyclopes Gray, 1821.	Troglodytes * Geoffroy, 1812.
Scolecophagus Geoffroy, 1795.	Cyclothurus Lesson, 1842.	Pan Oken, 1816.
Aye-aye Lacépède, 1799.	Didactyles Cuvier, 1829.	Mimetes * Leach, 1820.
Cheiromys Cuvier, 1800.	Dionyx * Geoffroy, 1835.	Theranthropus Brks., 1828.
Psilodactylus , Oken, 1816.	Eurypterna Gloger, 1841.	Anthropopithecus Bl., 1838.
Myspithecus * Blainv., 1839.	Myrmecolichmus Reich., 1836.	Hylanthropus Gloger, 1841.
Myslemur Blainville?, 1846.	Myrmydon Wagler, 1830.	Pseudanthropos Rhb., 1860.
		Engeco Haeckel, 1866.
		Pongo * Haeckel, 1866.

Three of the chimpanzee names—Mimetes, Pongo, and Troglodytes—are preoccupied, and several of the others are scarcely ever cited, even in synonymy. Anthropopithecus, the only one which is commonly used, is antedated by both Pan and Theranthropus.

An attempt has been made to call attention to cases of this kind by cross references. Thus, a generic name that is preoccupied is marked with a dagger (†) and followed by the name (in parentheses) distinctly proposed to replace it or by the earliest available name for the same genus. If several names have been proposed for the same species, cross references are given after each to the other names which are earlier. It must not be supposed, however, that all the synonyms are mentioned in this way. Critical study of the synonymy of some groups will doubtless bring to light numerous other names which are practically identical, but cross references to synonyms of this kind are beyond the scope of the present index.

* Preoccupied.

Genera and subgenera are treated alike, and entries showing when subgenera were raised to full generic rank have been omitted. But families and subfamilies have been carefully distinguished, and when a subfamily has been raised to the rank of a full family both names are given. Misprints, emendations, and variants in generic names are included only when they have a different initial letter or differ radically in spelling. If, however, the original form of either a family or subfamily name differs from the form now accepted both are mentioned. This may necessitate three distinct entries (as in the case of Natalinia, 1866; Natalinæ, 1892; and Natalidæ, 1899), but giving all the important forms facilitates tracing the history of the name. Later references are in all cases indented.

INDEX OF GENERA .

ARRANGED ACCORDING TO ORDERS AND FAMILIES.

[In the first column black-face type indicates that the genus is recent, italics that it is extinct.

A dagger (†) indicates that a generic name is not available because it is preoccupied.

A double dagger (‡) indicates that a family name is not available either because it was not based on a generic name or because the latter is preoccupied.]

^a Allotheria was proposed by MARSH in September, 1880 (Am. Journ. Sci. and Arts, 3d ser., XX, p. 239). The later term Multituberculata, which has come into more general use, was proposed by COPE in July, 1884 (Am. Naturalist, XVIII, p. 687).

In the latest revision of the group (AMEGHINO, Anales Mus. Nac. Buenos Aires, IX, p. 158, 1903), five families are recognized—Plagiaulacidæ, Polydolopidæ, Neoplagiaulacidæ, Promysopidæ, and Polymastodontidæ. Of these the first two are here recognized, the Neoplagiaulacidæ and Polymastodontidæ are combined with the Plagiaulacidæ, and the genera included under Promysopidæ are placed in 'Incertæ sedis.' The Bolodontidæ, which Ameghino combines with the Plagiaulacidæ, are recognized as a distinct family.

^b Stereognathidæ should be used for this family both on account of earlier publication as a family name and because it is based on the earliest generic name.

^b "Osborn & Earle place the group, except Oxyclænus among the Primates. The positive evidence of Primate relationship, aside from the merely primitive characters, is not very convincing, the strongest point being the character of the upper molars in Chriacus. * * * The type genus, Oxyclænus, shows a considerable resemblance to the Triisodontidæ, and perhaps should be included with them. In this case the remaining genera, Chriacus, Protochriacus, and Tricentes, will be united under Osborn & Earle's family Chriacidæ." (MATTHEW, Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., N. APPENDIX.

During the progress of the work through the press some additional names and notes have been found too late to insert in their proper places in Part I, although they have been incorporated in Part III. CORRECTIONS.

- P. 20. Type, under rootnote c, add—

Dr. Coues has proposed several terms to indicate whether or not a name was based on a type specimen and also the manner in which it was published. These terms deserve mention in this connection, although they have not come into general use:

Anonym: "A mere name; a 'nomen nudum;' a name resting upon no diagnosis, or other recognized basis."

Chironym: "A manuscript name; an unpublished name."

Graphonym: "An onym based upon a recognizable published plate, diagnosis, or description."

Typonym: "A name based upon indication of a type species, or of a type specimen." (Auk, I, p. 321, 1884.)

- P. 33. Preoccupied names, line 4, below the table, add—

The total number of preoccupied names indicated in this index is a little more than 400. Of these, as already shown, about 150, or nearly 40 per cent, are homonyms in the class Mammalia.

- P. 47. Geographical names, add—

Karoomys, Oltinootherium, Phiomia, Rhodanomys, and Saghatherium.

- P. 51. Victorlemoineia. For explanation see p. 706.

- P. 77. Aculeata. The date of publication should be April–June, 1795.

- P. 122. Arsinootherium, line 2, add—

Preliminary Note on Arsinootherium zittelli Beadn., Surv. Dept., Cairo, pp. 1–5, pls. I–VI, 1902.

Bison, Porcus, Ursulo, Vacca, and other names are quoted by Sherborn (Index Anim., 1902) from 'Edwards, in M. Catesby, Carol. I, 1771,' but are not valid generic names. They are simply the pre-Linnean names used by Catesby and republished subsequent to 1758.

- P. 137. Bisonus, after line 3, insert—

Bissonius GRAY, List Spec. Mamm. Brit. Mus., 153, 1843 (synonym of Poephagus.)

 “‘Mandrill’ seems to signify a ‘man-like Ape,’ the word ‘Drill’ or ‘Dril’ having been anciently employed in England to denote an Ape or Baboon. Thus in the fifth edition of Blount’s ‘Glossographia,’ or a dictionary interpreting the hard words of whatsoever language now used in our refined English tongue, . . . published in 1681, I find ‘Dril’ . . . also a large overgrown Ape and Baboon, so called.’ ‘Drill’ is used in the same sense in Charleton’s Onomasticon Zoicon, 1668. The singular etymology of the word given by Buffon seems hardly a probable one.” (HUXLEY, Man’s Place in Nature, p. 10, 1863.)

- P. 656. Synceros GRAY, 1872, after line 2, add—

Syncera ('GRAY') LYDEKKER, Wild Oxen, Sheep, and Goats of All Lands, 22, 1898 (quoted in synonymy as '1821'). This is an error; the name dates from 1872, not 1821.

- P. 666. Tayassu G. FISCHER, 1814, should stand—

Tagassu FRISCH, 1775.

Ungulata, Artiodactyla, Tagassuidæ.

Das Natur-System vierfüss. Thiere, in Tabellen, 3, Tab. Gen., 1775.

Type: 'Das amerikanische einzige Schwein-Geschlechte' (Sus tajacu Linnæus), from tropical America.

This form of the name necessitates a slight change in the spelling of the family name, which should stand Tagassuidæ.

- P. 666. Tayassu, line 5, add—

MERRIAM, Proc. Biol. Soc. Wash., XIV, 120, 1901; GILL, ibid., XV, 38, 1902; THOMAS, ibid., XV, 153-154, 197, 1902; ALLEN, Bull. Am. Mus. Nat. Hist., N. Y., XVI, 162, 168, 1902 (discussion of type).

- P. 692. Trilobodon. The family name Trilobodontidae was inserted from a manuscript list furnished by Dr. Santiago Roth. I supposed the name had been published, but I have been unable to find the reference.

- P. 703. Urus, line 2, before SWAINSON, insert—

BOJANUS, Nova Acta Acad. Cæs. Leop.-Car., XIII, 427, 1827.

- P. 703. Urus, after line 9, add—

Urus H. SMITH, 1827.

Ungulata, Artiodactyla, Bovidae.

Griffith's Cuvier, Anim. King., IV, 417-418, 1827.

Type: Urus scoticus H. Smith, from southern Scotland and northern England.

Urus H. Smith is the wild ox of the British Isles, and is distinct from Urus Frisch, 1775, a genus of bison.

- P. 721. Family and subfamily endings.

Geoffroy has called attention to the difficulty of distinguishing between the endings inæ and idæ when the words are spoken instead of written:

“Plusieurs auteurs adoptent en latin inæ au lieu d'ina, inés en français au lieu d'iens. Ces auteurs semblent avoir oublié, en adoptant la terminaison inés, inæ, que la langue zoologique n'est pas seulement destinée à être écrite. Comment un professeur, parlant devant un nombreux auditoire, pourra-t-il être compris, lorsqu'il parlera des Lémurinés (Lemurinæ) comme d'une tribu de la famille des Lémuridés (Lemuridæ), des Psittacinés (Psittacinæ) comme d'une division des Psittacidés (Psittacidæ)? Des mots aussi peu différents ne sont pour ainsi dire qu'un seul et même mot pour l'oreille. Des terminaisons nettement différentes sont indispensables.” (I. GEOFFROY, Cat. Méth. Coll. Mamm., Mus. Hist. Nat. Paris, p. xiii footnote, 1851.)

- P. 731. Callitricidæ, after line 3, add—

Callitrichidæ THOMAS, Ann. & Mag. Nat. Hist., 7th ser., XII, p. 457, Oct. 1, 1903.
